PREFACE.

THE extraordinary stimulus given to researches in the genealogical field by the various patriotic societies, is one of the happy signs of the times. The activities of commercial, and the blandishments of social life, the mad race for wealth and the pathetic struggle for the necessities of daily existence, the indifference of many to everything outside and beyond their own personal and narrow circle, and the lack of opportunity in others have, until quite recently, made the work of the genealogist an exceptional and unappreciated labor. When men are concerned only about their present condition and individual interests, caring nothing for ancestry or posterity, they live in a very small world, and, like the squirrel playing in its cage, fancy they are happy. But that which now is, is the result of what has been. "No man liveth unto himself and no man dieth unto himself" was the conclusion of an ancient and revered philosopher, and he who cares nothing for those whose transmitted name he bears, and who have written that name high up among the records of the race, is lacking in the essentials of a self-respecting manhood. And the world has too many of this sort of people.

But because there are others that cherish a legitimate pride of pedigree and of country, this history has been written. It represents the continuous labors of a few persons for about forty years, supplemented by the work of the historian who has sufficiently overcome indifference and discouragement to offer to the members of a large and honorable family this result of his researches. It does not claim to be a perfect and exhaustive record, nor is it likely to be free from errors. The careless manner in which some family records are prepared and kept, the tendency to substitute fiction for fact, the differences in names and dates of the same persons reported by different branches of the same family, and the refusal of other persons to answer inquiries at all, make it inevitable that mistakes will creep into the most carefully prepared genealogy. Accordingly, all persons interested in this particular history are invited to inform the author of any authenticated errors, and he will correct them in a future supplement, adding the names, dates, and pedigree of all who are not herein included. He now submits this interesting result of his labors to the fair judgment of all members of the interesting and honored family whose distinguished record it has been his ambition to preserve, in the hope that it will meet with their cordial approbation.

THE KNOWLTON FAMILY GENEALOGY

CHAPTER I

The Knowltons of England

AMONG the stories of the Middle Ages, there is a tradition of two brothers enlisting in the service of William the Conqueror, and fighting so bravely during his invasion of Wales that they readily won their spurs. Having observed that they resided, the one on a hill and the other on a knoll, or lesser hill, the king, on investing them with the honors and insignia of knighthood, dubbed them Hill-ton and Knoll-ton. Whatever of truth may attach to this tradition, it is certain that the name is an ancient one, born out of its own native soil. A large proportion of English proper names has been suggested by local situations and associations, and of these the name Knowlton is one of the most striking, as it is one of the most ancient. The suffix ton is the old Saxon tún, town, so that in its primary use it meant the people, or town, on the knoll, but in process of time it lost this collective force, and was applied to the chief family, or personage, resident thereon. For the purpose both of government and revenue, the English people were grouped in Hundreds, so called because one hundred families were made to comprise one district, or borough.

In Domesday Book, that curious and quaint record of estates and surveys which the Conqueror ordered in 1083, that he might know the extent of his realm and provide for the royal revenues, there was a Knowlton Hundred, originally but a mere hamlet in Dorsetshire, which became by royal appointment a Fair Town, and a rural centre of considerable importance. The original hamlet and manor have long since passed away, but the name survives, and its present boundaries include Knowlhill, Long Crichel, Crichel-Govis, Crichel-Lucy, All Saints, Boreson, Week Farm, Phillipston, and Woodlands. This estate was anciently held by Ansgar, and in Domesday Book the name is Chenoltone, while in subsequent books it is indifferently spelled Cnolton, Knolton, Knollton, Knowlton, Knoulton, Knowton, Knowlden,* Nowton, Noulton, and Nolton. A careful inspection of the Wills and Administrations in the Prerogative Courts of Canterbury and York reveals these varied spellings of the one and same name, for it is differently spelled in the same document, and by the same person. When the reader remembers that proper names were until a very recent date spelled phonetically, or according to their sound, he will find a ready explanation of these singular orthographies.

* Knowlden means, "at the foot of the knoll."

The Knowlton Genealogy

Knowlton Parish and Knowlton Hall still designate a Manor and Baronial Residence in Kent County, six miles from the archiepiscopal city of Canterbury. It originally belonged to Odo, Bishop of Baieux, who was subsequently disgraced, and his property confiscated to the Crown. In the fifteenth year of the Conqueror, the estate was surveyed, and given to one of his followers, from whom it passed by Knight's service to Perot, and thence to other owners. In the thirty-third year of Edward the First, Perot assumed the title of Lord Knollton, an early example of the transfer of a proper name from the soil to its owner. Lord Knowlton left the estate to his daughter Christian, who married William de Langley, High Sheriff under Edward III. (1327-77). His son called himself William Knollton, Esq., during the reign of Henry VI. (1429-71). In the twentieth year of Henry VII. (1505), William's son John (whose son and successor, Edward, married Elizabeth Peyton, daughter of Sir John Peyton, who was the next owner) came into possession, and he married Dorothy Tyndal, daughter of Sir John Tyndal, Governor of the Tower of London. His grandson and heir, Thomas, had children, Dorothy, Catherine, William, and Thomas. From the time when Sir Perot adopted the title Lord Knollton, down to the day of Sir D'Aetb, it is matter of history that the lords of this manor were known indifferently both by their surnames and by their adopted titles, and the Parish and Hall now perpetuate that historic fact. Knowlton Hall is a fine residence situated on a knoll in a beautiful park of two hundred acres, which are kept in a high state of cultivation, and adorned with the choicest creations of the gardener's artistic genius. The land is gently rolling, affording an agreeable diversity of hill and dale, and beautiful walks and paths entice one into the shade of grand old trees that have delighted for ages the eyes that faded out of human life centuries ago.

An examination of the fragmentary histories and ecclesiastical records of the sixteenth century discloses the fact that the names of these Kentish Knowltons are precisely those that appear and reappear, again and again, among the families of the Knowltons of at least five succeeding generations. Every Knowlton of this period was found within, or near, the county of Kent, and the conclusion would appear to be irresistible that the surname itself came from this particular estate. Indeed, the name could never have been used here in its original and wider significance, for there is not at present, nor has there ever been, even a village settlement here. Besides the Hall, there are only the Rectory and two farm-houses on the estate, and the whole parish reports but twenty-six souls.

Thomas Knowlton, the antiquarian hereafter mentioned, was fond of telling of the distinction enjoyed by one of his ancestors, a retainer of the Earl of Warwick, who always appeared in Court dress, with a silver and jewelled sword at his belt, and other insignia of rank, and who stood high with the King. He had charge of one of the Earl's castles in Kent, and was a descendant of the Knowltons above referred to. A granddaughter (Mrs. H. S. Perkins, now living) has often heard the above and many other interesting facts told by the Knowltons concerning the position of their ancestors.

There were Knowltons in Canterbury, and in the City of London as early as 1550, and the published "Visitations and Allegations of the Provinces of York and Canterbury" clearly show that they were never a numerous or a scattered family, but that until the year 1728 they were confined entirely to the counties of Middlesex and Kent. They invariably married by license instead of by banns, which as invariably indicates a recognized social position and condition of comfort, for such license could be obtained only from the Archbishop of Canterbury, and at considerable expense—about £50. In these old records the titles of Mr. and Esq. are frequently used, indicating a social status above that of the common people.

The identity of location, the dates of birth, and the constant repetition of the names of children—and the very names which were given to the children in the New World—would seem to fix beyond any reasonable doubt the ancestry of the first emigrants to America, and to derive their descent from the Knowltons of the old Kentish Manor. It is sufficiently clear that the English progenitors were people of substance, and their occupations were by no means menial. Captain William, the first emigrant, sailed his own ship, and George, his probable brother, was a subscriber in 1624 to a fund for repairing the parish church at Chiswick, which Cromwell's troops had desecrated by converting it into a barrack and stable for his men and their horses.

John's will was probated September 30, 1781, and the following extract shows him to have been a man of substance.

“I, John Knowlton, Quilton, in the County of Northampton, Gardener to the Right Hon. Earl Fitzwilliam, do make this my last will and testament in manner & form following: i. e. I give unto my dear wife Elizabeth Knowlton £500 to be paid to her within one month after my decease, also during her natural life the Interest & Dividends from £500 in stock of South Sea Annuits also £200 to be invested in Lands & Securities. . . . And whereas, I have before given my oldest Son John £300, and to my daughter Mary, wife of Edward Hare £300, and to my youngest Son William £100 and to Ann G. my daughter £80, and in order that they may now have equality in my Substance, it is my wish that William should be paid £200, and my daughter Ann G. £220. . . . I give and bequeath the Interest of £500 to my son William's children, John and Elizabeth, until John shall be 15 years old and be apprenticed, but after that time one half of the income to be given to William's daughter Elizabeth until she is 17 years of age.”

A special bequest was made to Edward Hare who was one of the executors, John and William, sons of the testator, being the other two.

John and his brother Thomas early developed a remarkable gift for landscape gardening, and their genius soon attracted the attention and secured the liberal encouragement of noble patrons. John entered the service of the Earl Fitzwilliam of Northumberland. The magnificent estates of the Earl gave ample scope for John's talents, and he spent there the years of a long and successful life, which ended in the summer of 1781. He was 93 years old, and was buried in Londesboro churchyard, Yorkshire.

Thomas (1690) had a more conspicuous position, and, consequently, a more public record. At a very early age he entered the service of Dr. Wm. Sherard at Eltham, a suburb of London, where he at once and for a long time after, left the impress of his genius. This country seat was owned by a graduate and Fellow of Oxford University, whose remarkable devotion to the science of botany amounted to a passion. He had been an extensive traveller in foreign countries, while tutor to Lord Howland, subsequently the Earl of Bedford, and, later on, British Consul to Smyrna, and had, therefore, exceptional opportunities of collecting the rarest plants of the Orient. He founded a large herbarium in Smyrna, enriching it with a marvellous variety of floral and botanical wealth, and his reputation soon admitted him to the intimate friendship of Boerhaave, Hermann, Tournefort, Vaillant, and Micheli. So assiduous was he, so fearless and adventurous along the lines of his favorite researches, that he was at one time nearly shot, having been mistaken for a wolf. In the year 1700 he returned to England, and with his brother, a noted physician of London, settled at Eltham, bringing to their charming home the fruits of his exhaustive researches in the East.

It is no small tribute to Thomas Knowlton that he was selected by two such gentlemen to become their landscape gardener when still a very young man. The Earl of Burlington owned, as Duke of Devonshire, large estates in this vicinity, and the gardens of Eltham could not have failed to arrest his admiring attention, for in 1728 he offered Mr. Knowlton the charge of his country seat at Londesboro, Yorkshire. Whoever has had the good fortune to visit this delightful spot will readily understand the inspiration which the natural topography of the country would furnish to a mind keenly appreciative of the beautiful. The estate is situated in a fine rolling country, two and a half miles from the quaint old Fair Town of Market Weighton, whose smooth white roads, hard as adamant, wind over hill and through dale, past greenest pastures where sleek cattle feed, among groups of white cottages whose clustering vines are not a whit more attractive than the unpretentious comfort within, and by the inevitable and picturesque churches, such as the faith and liberality of past generations have planted here and all over Mother England. Arrived at Londesborough one sees a charming foreground, than which there is none in all the Yorkshire Wolds more worth lingering over. Great stretches of crisp lawn, avenues of stately yews, flowers of every tint and species massed in banks on which raindrops are glistening, and flanked by grand old groves in which the woodman's axe has not been heard for many a century, delight the eye.

Londesborough House stands on the summit of a terrace, at the foot of which is a lovely lake, into which the bending trees dip their branches, and the passing clouds are mirrored.

The colossal towers of York Minster, and the graceful spires of Selby, Howden and Goole are all in sight, and at evening one can turn the pages of Gray and read back into the poetic past as he hears "the curfew toll the knell of parting day." Not long before Thomas Knowlton came here the plain around was but a marsh, and the hand of philanthropy found no better or more imperative work than that of building a cell for two pious monks who should serve as guides to strangers. If the author pauses to indulge in this retrospective reverie, it is because the life and character of men are so largely the product of their surroundings. In a less poetic spot Thomas Knowlton might never have been known beyond the sound of his village bells. But Londesborough had been the theatre of tragic events. Romans, Angles, and Saxons, the Bloody Clifford and his chastened son, the "Shepherd Lord," the Burlingtons and their congenial friends, Pope, Garrick, Sydney Smith, Wyatt, and Violette, the Viennese champion danseuse of the world, were all here. The villa of Edwin the Saxon was also here on the Derwent, and, being converted to Christianity, he is said to have destroyed a pagan temple, and on its ruins to have erected the parish church where, centuries after, the Knowltons found their spiritual home, and under the shadow of which they were buried. Here for twenty-four years the "Shepherd Lord" lived in concealment, he having inherited the estate from his mother, the Baroness de Vesoi, of Bromfleet. After his death the estate passed to Richard Boyle, third Earl of Burlington, in whose service and in that of his successors the Knowltons lived for 115 years. Burlington having died without male issue, the estate passed to the Duke of Devonshire, who had married his daughter. This powerful family, then and since the richest in all England, had magnificent estates all over the British dominion, and the Knowltons had ample scope for the exercise of their gifts.

Under the skilful hand of Thomas Knowlton, the Londesborough estate became famous among its English rivals. He was a diligent student for those times, and Frederic the Great was so much his military ideal that he arranged the gardens in the form of Prussian battalions.

His love for his favorite science created a spirit of discovery and adventure that introduced him to the Savans of the Royal Society, and he became a valued correspondent of Da Costa, Mark Catesby, and others. He was accustomed to wade for hours in ponds of cold water in his search for rare species of aquatic plants, and on one of these expeditions he discovered the "moor ball," a species of the fresh-water algæ of the Conferva family, called by Linnæus "Egagropila," from its resemblance to the hairy balls found in the stomachs of goats. A botanic genus of the Ranunculaceæ, comprising five or six species of plants indigenous to the Cape of Good Hope, has been named after him. Mr. Knowlton also discovered the site of Delgovicia, a long buried camp and temple of the Romans under Septimius Severus. In the "Philosophical Transactions of the Royal Society" are found extracts of letters written in 1767. He says :

"We dug in several places, and discovered a circular foundation 5 ft. wide, and the place within 45 ft. in diameter, which, it seems, was a temple to Diana, said to have been at Goodmanham, but no appearance of it there was ever found. There were many other foundations which had Roman pavements within them, by which, after the dissolution of the Temple, it became a Roman station, then called Delgovicia. In this just discovered the ruins and foundations are a demonstration of the once grandeur of the place."

He also discovered the site of a great battle-field in which

"vast numbers fell, and were so laid in heaps, and covered with the chalky soil in little tumuli of the space of 2 or 3 square yards, in which were found great quantities of human bones. And now there is an acre covered over with them lying close to each other, and it is one of the greatest curiosities ever seen."

Among the curious treasures of the Museum of the Royal Society of London are two pairs of deer's horns, unearthed by Mr. Knowlton after they had been buried for eight hundred years in the river Rye, a tributary of the Derwent. One measured from the nose to the top of the skull 22 inches, and to the tip of the horn 24 ft. and both skull and horns weighed 68 lbs. The horns of the other are shorter, but the space between them measures six feet ; another breadth of the palm or web is 25 inches ; enormous as they are, they were not of full growth, as they were covered with "velvet." They were found buried 6 ft. deep.

Mr. Knowlton made voluminous contributions to botanical and antiquarian literature, and his taste and judgment were in constant request from other estates than Londesborough. His son Charles entered Cambridge University, being matriculated in St. John's College in 1746, and while on a visit there, Thomas Knowlton wrote, with discriminating eye and characteristic vigor, to Prof. Da Costa :

“I received your most valuable present which I find abounding in plates, and that he (the author) has copied most of ‘Rumphus on Shells’ in every plate, and well copied they are, and that without taking any notice from whence so taken. I hope ere long to make you some returns. It is said by most people that Yorkshire hams are very much admired, and if you should think so I will send some up if you will let me know whether they will be agreeable.

“I was at Cambridge, but was greatly disappointed in the design of the Physic Garden which is laid out so preposterously that instead of pleasing gives a disgust designed to please the ignorant rather than the curious, and Miller is not often seen in the garden, having a salary for walking about. Of all the gardens I ever saw, it is the worst furnished. I will say no more, truly lamenting that the design is so erroneously conducted.”

Mr. Knowlton's home was a favorite resort of Dr. Johnson, Drake the historian, Dr. Fothergill, and the great Garrick, and a stone bench is still shown which was the chosen seat of Pope. The integrity of this remarkable man is illustrated by the following incident :

A young lady of high position had married against her parents' will, and her father promptly disinherited her, and bequeathed his large estates to Thomas Knowlton. On learning the facts in the case, Mr. Knowlton made search for the lady, found her in London, and conveyed to her all that he had received from her father. The grateful lady made the long journey from London to Londesboro in her private carriage—a long journey in those days—to express in person her unspeakable gratitude for this noble act of Knowlton. “Madam,” replied Thomas, “I deserve no thanks. The property was yours, not mine. I could never have kept it.”

His devotion to his favorite science was so intense and his idiosyncrasies so marked, that he requested to be buried in the pleasure grounds which he had beautified, and for this purpose he selected his own burial plot. But in later years the Parish Wardens enlarged the boundaries of the churchyard, and so took Thomas in.

Rev. Charles Knowlton (39), son of Thomas, graduated from Cambridge University in 1751, and, on taking Holy Orders in 1753, was presented by the Earl of Burlington to the living of Keighley, Yorkshire. This was one of the oldest rectories in England, its first minister having been settled there in 1245. Keighley is an old Saxon proper name, meaning the field of Kihel. In Domesday Book it is surveyed as the property of Ralph de Kighley, Knight, whose son Richard bestowed it on the prior and canons of the neighboring monastery of Bolton. After the dissolution of the monasteries, the parish and ecclesiastical patronage passed into the hands of the Earl of Cumberland, and subsequently to the Earls of Burlington, the third of whom, the Rt. Hon. Sir Richard Boyle, was the owner of Londesborough Manor, and other enormous estates, and the patron of Thomas Knowlton. Five priors had successively been at the head of this ancient parish, and Charles Knowlton was the twenty-first rector. He found here a famous agricultural district, with a widely scattered people, who were more thrifty than cultured. An examination of the parish registers written up by him during his unprecedentedly long rectorship of sixty-one years, reveals the average literary attainment of his people, for, of the great numbers whom he officially admitted to the holy estate of matrimony, only a very few could write their own names, the most of them simply making their mark. Mr. Knowlton ministered in a rude age, and to a rude people, who were the natural product of the country itself. Keighley is situated in a mountainous district, on the side of hills, to climb which habitually both requires and develops a sturdy physique.

The Knowlton Genealogy

The visitor, however, is well repaid for the effort, for a splendid panorama is then unfolded to the delighted eye, and the beauty of the encircling hills as they retreat towards the horizon, standing sentry over the rich pastures between, is enhanced by the waters of the sylvan Aire, that flows through and among them. The character of the people in Mr. Knowlton's time is set forth in the following lines of a poet of that day.

“Thence to Keighley where are mountains
Sleepy, threatening, lively fountains,
Rising hills and pleasant valleys,
Bon Socias and good fellows,
Jovial, jocund, jolly bowlers,
As if they were the world's controllers.”

There is here an allusion to a prevailing passion for bowling and other rude sports, in which Mr. Knowlton is said to have participated freely, and thus to have made himself exceedingly popular among the lusty Yorkshiremen. Bull-baiting was a local amusement which was long fostered by a strange superstition. The bull was fastened to a ring in a huge stone, directly in front of the church, and worried by dogs, under the pretence that only thus could the beef be made fit for use, and candles were burned before it day and night as long as it was exposed for sale. Before Mr. Knowlton's death the brutal sport had been discontinued, not unlikely through his influence, for his reputation was that of a generous and kind-hearted pastor, who was not in sympathy with any form of cruelty. He was as great a favorite with the female portion of his flock as with the male, being handsome in person and courtly in manners.

He married Miss Sarah Fowler of Keighley, Dec. 19, 1755, by whom he had (41) Thomas, June 2, 1758.

(43) Charles, December 7, 1761. d. in infancy.

(44) Charles, June 29, 1764.

(45) Sarah, January 14, 1767.

During the rectorship of Mr. Knowlton, Keighley became a manufacturing town, large quantities of woollen goods being made for the London market, and it was probably the loss of a part of its rural beauty that caused a crusty old historian to write :

“This parish lyeth immediately North of Bingley in the course of the Are, without one feature or one fact belonging to it which can interest the eye, the memory, or the imagination. I may then be excused if I betray some anxiety to reach pleasanter scenes, for hard is the fate of a Topographer while he respires the smook of manufactories, and is stunned by the din of recent populations.”

Mr. Knowlton was appointed one of the Canons of York Minster, and was widely known and honored. He died June 28, 1814, at the ripe old age of 87, and was buried under the chancel of his venerable parish church, which still remains the one conspicuous architectural feature of old Keighley. His name is cast in the door of an iron safe where the parish registers are kept, and a wooden tablet in black and gold marks the date of his rectorship.

Of his three remaining children, but one married. Elizabeth Knowlton became the wife of Mr. Robert Dawson, August 1, 1793.

Thomas Knowlton (41), son of Rev. Charles, inherited the genius and followed the profession of his grandfather. At an early age he entered the service of the Earl of Burlington, and by a diligent use of his opportunities became not only a famous landscape gardener, but also a man of affairs, and the agent of the Earl of Burlington and of his heir the Duke of Devonshire. Sarah, his sister, had charge of Burlington House at Londesborough, and as such she appears in the letters of Lady Granville. When twenty-four years of age, she was considered by all the great people of Burlington House as a remarkable beauty. Even in middle life, she was declared by the Duke of Devonshire to be the handsomest woman in Derbyshire.

CHATSWORTH.

All travelled Americans know something of "Beautiful Chatsworth," the favorite residence and estate of the Dukes of Devonshire. Their ancestors were lineal descendants from Robert de Gernon of Suffolk, who married the daughter of Lord Cavendish, and whose children, according to the custom of that time, took the name of Cavendish, out of compliment to the mother. Chatsworth was bought by Sir William Cavendish, Privy Councillor to Henry VIII., Edward VI., and Queen Mary, early in the sixteenth century, and on his death his son William, Baron Cavendish and Duke of Devonshire, succeeded to his father's enormous estates. He was a famous man both in statesmanship and letters, and a munificent patron of art. His mother, the celebrated "Bess of Hardwicke," began the building of Chatsworth, and devoted all her life to the work, under the influence of a prophecy that her life would be preserved as long as she should continue that work. A severe frost stopped the workmen, and the mortar was dissolved first in hot water and then in hot ale, but all to no purpose. The building ceased, and she died in 1607. Her son enlarged and improved what she had begun, under the supervision of Sir Christopher Wren, and Sir William Spencer, the ninth Duke of Devonshire, completed the work, making Chatsworth the most magnificent residence in the United Kingdom. The park is twelve miles in circuit, and is laid out with consummate and lavish beauty, and includes an orangery, conservatories covering one acre, an arboretum one hundred acres in extent, a French and a kitchen garden. Chatsworth House itself is a palace of art where have been brought the best creations of the sculptor's and the painter's genius, and through the liberality of its lordly owner a large part of it is open to tourists.

Here lived Thomas and Sarah Knowlton, the former being the agent of the eighth and ninth Dukes in the management of their vast possessions. The fact that Sir Joseph Paxton was his immediate successor sufficiently indicates the importance of the position and the great responsibility of its occupant. So large was the number of officials connected with the care and administration of Chatsworth that the "Great Duke," as he was called, decided to build a model village for their special use, and the result of that determination was EDENSOR.

This is the most unique spot in all England, and it comprises a village, a parish, and a shire. There are thirty-six houses built in the form of Anglo-Swiss and Italian Gothic villas, each being different from all the others. The equipment is complete, there being besides the pretty residences a handsome church, post- and telegraph-offices, a school, and offices of the agent, or steward as his title is, and whose beautiful residence is the most pleasing architectural feature of Edensor, except the church. The latter is a modern structure built on the foundations of the old church in which the Knowltons worshipped, and preserving a portion of the original. The Lords of the Manor are buried here, and in the adjacent churchyard, the most interesting of whose monumental tablets is the one erected to Lord Cavendish who was cruelly murdered in Phoenix Park, Dublin. This tablet bears a touching inscription, and the following verses of Holy Scripture :

"Blessed Are The Peacemakers, For Theirs Is The Kingdom Of Heaven."

"Blessed Are The Pure In Heart, For They Shall See God."

The training which Thomas Knowlton had received from his grandfather, and the experience gained in the service of his noble patron, naturally made him the Duke's choice when he concluded to build his pet and model village. Mr. Knowlton therefore left Londesboro with his sister Sarah, and the two took up their residence at Chatsworth, the sister being his housekeeper, and having no other relation to the Duke and his family than that of a neighbor and friend. Her beauty and accomplishments had early attracted ardent suitors, one of whom had been accepted, and arrangements were made for the marriage, but a brief illness hurried her lover to his grave. Miss Knowlton resolutely shut, with her own hand, the golden gates of matrimonial affection, and never after permitted the addresses of admiring suitors.

LISMORE.

Among the Devonshire estates was Lismore with its famous castle. The aboriginal toparchs had selected this spot on account of its scenic attractions, calling it Magh-Sgiath, the "Chosen Field," and the earthworks around their dwellings were of such extent that the site was named Lios-mor, the "Great Fortified Habitation." The pagan Lis, or Fort, was the abode of the old Irish chieftains. Saint Carthagh, a refugee monk of noble birth, built a great abbey here in 635, and in 1185 Prince John began the erection of the magnificent castle which now stands above the stream of the beautiful Blackwater, lifting its lofty towers two hundred feet above the deep moat and the murmuring river, one of the grandest fortresses ever devoted to the genius of beauty, and to the security of man in troublous times. Lismore and its castle were for centuries considered so choice a possession that the old Irish chieftains kept the red tide of war rolling through and around it for hundreds of years. The old chronicles say :

"Lis-Mor is a famous and holye Citie, half of which is an asylum into which no woman ever dare enter : but it is full of cells and holy monasteries ; and religious men in great numbers abide there : and holy men flock there from all Ireland and Britain, beeing desyrous of going from thence to Christ."

Of the twenty churches once here, but two remain, one of them being the old Cathedral which was evolved from the Abbey of St. Carthagh. Alfred the Great was educated here, and here he gained that fame as a harpist that made him successful in gaining the ear of the Danish Prince. Queen Elizabeth bestowed this great property on Sir Walter Raleigh, who planted here the first potatoes Ireland ever had, and in these lordly apartments he enjoyed the first tobacco brought as a fragrant offering from the New World to the Old. Sir Walter sold this property to the same Sir Richard Boyle, Earl of Cork and Burlington, who became the patron of the English Knowltons, and thus its history is more or less identified with them. His duties as agent and steward of the Dukes of Devonshire called Thomas frequently to Lismore, and his office was at the arch in the great quadrangle shaded by a venerable beech of gigantic dimensions. Sir William Spencer, the ninth Duke, offered the permanent charge of the castle and estate to Thomas Knowlton, who had already had charge for 18 years, but as the family of His Grace resided there but a small portion of the year, and as Chatsworth afforded more scope for his abilities, and more congenial surroundings, Mr. Knowlton declined to hold the position longer. His work at Lismore survives, however, for Sir William interested himself in making Lismore something of an ideal village. He built long streets of stone and adobe cottages for the peasants and laborers, enclosing the highways in high stone walls, and building the cottages flush to the street. Many of them are but one story high, white or of neutral tints, and ornamented with flowers and shrubs, and presenting a tidy and extremely pleasing appearance. To the taste and energy of Thomas Knowlton, Lismore owes not a little of its quaint and picturesque beauty. His declination of the Duke's appointment led to his eventual retirement from active duty, and he retired to Darley Dale, in the famous Peak of Derbyshire, purchasing the estate of Darley House, now owned by the Pagets, where he resided with his sister until his death, in 1836. He was commissioned colonel of the regiment of Chatsworth Rifles, and though living the life of a civilian he always wore his sword and epaulettes even in the privacy of his home. He had a singular aversion to driving in a carriage, and his sister was obliged to enjoy without his company the elegant establishment of which a few remaining old people talk with admiring recollection. His time was spent in the field and gardens of Darley House, directing his laborers in beautifying his estate and in producing fruitful harvests.* He received an ample salary from the Duke until his death, and after making some special bequests, one of which was a perpetual dole of bread to the poor of Londesborough parish from Christmas to Easter, he left all his estate to his sister Sarah. He was buried at his own request with his grandparents, his uncle John, and his cousin John in Londesborough churchyard. He had served the Devonshire Dukes for about 50 years.

His sister survived him nine years. She is still remembered by a few old residents as a remarkably beautiful woman even in her old age, a lady of benevolent spirit, but very exclusive in social life. Her relations with the great people of Chatsworth House were of the most intimate character as appears from her correspondence, for she writes, New Year's Day, 1843 :

“The Duke of Devonshire returned to Chatsworth on the 21st Inst, and the day following honored me with a call. I was at dinner, having only taken my Soup, and His Grace would leave the Drawing Room and come into the Dining Room where he carved for me. He is everything that is good and amiable.”

Under date of July 6th, 1841, she writes to Hon. Paul Holland, of Knowlton, Quebec :

“I find you are a true Knowlton, never having sought for the arms of the family in the Herald's College. . . My brother and I had them from Mrs Adams who, you will recollect, was descended from my grandfather's brother, her maiden name being Knowlton. She got them from the Herald's Office in order to have them quartered with her husband's Arms to paint on their carriage. Thus we became possessed of them. My brother afterwards ascertained from the College that they were right . . . As Ladies have no right to the crest, I have only the Arms cut on a Lozenge on my seal which I will seal this letter with for you to see. I shall be glad to receive a letter with your seal when you have it cut. You may safely adopt them. My great grandfather's name was William, my grandfather's Thomas, and your relations having kept up those names shows that we are descended from the same source."

Among her personal effects were found a Prayer Book formerly belonging to Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Knowlton (1690), and a paper signed, J. Knowlton, 1582, the only possible inference from which, even were there no other testimony, is that these Knowltons were the kinsfolk of the founder of the American family.

The Darley Dale Knowltons were members of the old parish, whose church is still one of the most venerable and picturesque structures in the land: Its exterior is unaltered, but the interior is modernized, and beautifully treated by ecclesiastical art. It originally had four galleries, to accommodate the parishioners of four different towns, each being assigned its own gallery. During the latter part of his life, Col. Thomas Knowlton had a falling out with the parish officers, and thereafter he read prayers and a sermon twice a day to his own household with pious persistency.

Miss Knowlton had also a marked personal peculiarity. Her affections, which were blighted by the untimely death of her lover, turned to cats, of which she had numerous and remarkable specimens. A room in Darley House was set apart for their exclusive use, and they accompanied her by turns, when she went to drive. It would appear that she thought herself the last of her family, or that between her sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Dawson, and herself some alienation had occurred, for she left her entire estate to Hon. Paul Holland Knowlton, of Knowlton, Province of Quebec, the romantic circumstances of which will be narrated in the Canadian chapter. He visited Darley Dale and was entertained by the Duke of Devonshire, who declared to him that the Knowltons were the best agents Chatsworth and Lismore had ever had. Miss Knowlton died June 9, 1845, aged nearly 79 years, and was buried by her brother's side in Londesborough. With her, the English Knowltons virtually disappear.

CHAPTER II

The Knowltons of New England

CAPTAIN WILLIAM KNOWLTON sailed from the port of London for Nova Scotia in 1632-4, as is usually believed, although this date is only approximate. A record is kept of those emigrants only who, on leaving England, took the oath of loyalty to the English Crown, and promised conformity to the Doctrine, Discipline, and Worship of the Established Church, and who also swore that they were "no subsidy men."

As a large number desired to avoid this enforced allegiance, and to enter the land of their adoption free to follow their own political and religious inclinations, they took no legal departure, but sailed away with more or less secrecy, and were therefore not enrolled in the official records of the government. As no record of Knowlton appears in the Customs Department at London, it must be inferred that William was independent in political action, and a non-conformist in religion. As every resident within the geographical boundaries of an English parish was enrolled in its records, no matter what his faith might be, Capt. Knowlton and family were undoubtedly so enrolled at Chiswick. Unfortunately, the old parish church was seized by Cromwell and his troopers in 1645, and used as a garrison. His horses were stalled in its chancel, the men were quartered in the nave, and all the early parochial records were burned, except a small account book of the church wardens. In this book the name of George Nolleton appears as one of a number obligated to pay for repairs on the church from 1619-1622. Of the children of Capt. William already mentioned, John, William, Dea Thomas, and, probably, Samuel, accompanied him in his voyage to America, for one of this name was found in Hingham soon after the others appeared in Ipswich, and he died in 1655, leaving a will, probated September 1655, in which his "brother John" is named as executor. As John, son of Capt. William, is the only one answering to this relation and date, Samuel must have been the son of Capt. William, following the family to this country at a later date, perhaps.

Capt. William died on the westward voyage, and his widow and children proceeded to Nova Scotia, where they remained but a short time. The next we hear of them is in Ipswich, Mass., where John became a resident in 1639,

OLD IPSWICH, MASS.

William and Thomas following him in 1642. This old town had been organized only the year before John Knowlton selected it for his home. Musconnomet, the Sagamore of the Agawams, deeded to Mr. John Winthrop for a consideration of twenty pounds sterling a tract of land containing several thousand acres, with exclusive right to all timber, game, and fisheries therein comprised. The deed was executed January 28, 1638. Winthrop had begun a settlement here in 1633, and had met with armed interference by the neighboring Indians. For the purpose of securing a well-ordered and godly community, it was provided that no one could become an inhabitant without consent of the freemen, nor could one become a member of this corporate body unless he were a member of some church, or could furnish from his minister a certificate of soundness in the faith and godliness of life.

To each freeman was allotted from the town lands a farm of fifty acres, besides a house lot, and no householder could build his dwelling more than half a mile distant from the meeting house. This provision had in view a surer defence against the savages, and a compulsory attendance on divine service, and when a householder excused himself from such attendance on the ground of living too far to attend in stormy weather, the town promptly sold him out, and transferred him to a nearer location. Bachelors were required to place themselves under the domestic protection and moral influence of their married neighbors. Every inhabitant must have some industrial occupation, and because the chief dependence for daily bread was the farm, mechanics were required to leave their work and assist the farmer whenever the safe housing of the crops was threatened. The Indians gave these early settlers such trouble by their thievish habits that every man was required to choose an ear mark for his cattle and swine, while the Indians were forbidden to mark theirs, and when beef and pork were offered for sale by them, they were required to produce the ears as proof of their rightful ownership. For money they used bullets and wampum, each of the former being equivalent to a farthing, and of the latter, six, four white and two blue, for a penny. This paternal government extended to the private affairs of the household, regulating diet, parental discipline, and personal manners. No buns or cakes could be eaten except at weddings and funerals. Not until 1753 was a carriage owned or used by these hardy people. They were mostly farmers, and in order to keep their farms intact the law of entail from the father to the son was enforced. If one died childless, the law required the devise of his estate to his nearest male kinsman. Not until 1792 did the General Court permit the free disposal of property. Every freeman who was a military or sea captain, minister, doctor, lawyer, teacher, merchant, or graduate of some college, was called Mr. and his wife Mistress, while all others were called by the inferior titles of goodman and goodwife. The thrift of these Ipswich settlers attracted so many prospecting inhabitants that in 1650 no further grant of farms was possible, there being at this date one hundred and forty-six families in residence.

The Knowlton Genealogy

The first church in Ipswich, 1646, was the "Church of Christ," and it embraced one hundred and sixty souls.

"The Church of Christ, here, consists of 160 souls, being pure in their conversation, and free from epidemical views of all Reforming Churches, which under Christ is secured by their pious and orthodox ministry."

Patriotic devotion to their new country was a marked feature of these early settlers. Four of the Knowltons, John, Benjamin, Abraham, and William, served in King Philip's war; several of them participated in the siege and capture of Louisburg; the rosters of the Revolutionary troops frequently bear the Knowlton name, and in the subsequent wars of 1812 and of the Rebellion, this same patriotic stock is still at the front. Old Ipswich gave an extraordinary proof of this devotion to country on June 9, 1788, when all the commoners, including many Knowltons, surrendered all their lands to pay the town debts incurred during the War of Independence.

Amid such surroundings and influences the Knowltons began their career in America.

1 Captain William and Ann Elizabeth Smith had :

- (2) John, 1610. m. Marjery Wilson.
- (3) William, 1615. m. Elizabeth.
- (4) Dea. Thomas, 1622. m. Susannah; m. 2d Mary Kimball.
- (4A) Samuel.

Capt. William was at least part owner of the vessel in which he sailed for America. He died on the voyage, probably not far from Nova Scotia, for a land surveyor, Alphonso Wells by name, in the employ of the Canadian Government, brought word to the Canadian Knowltons that, when surveying land in Shelburne in 1839, he had found an ancient head-stone there bearing the name of William Knowlton, 1632. Anneapolis was the first settlement made in Nova Scotia, in 1604. This was captured by the English in 1620, and retaken by the original settlers the following year. In 1632, the French were in possession of portions of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and there were here a few families from the Colony of Massachusetts Bay. It was probably here that Capt. William's remains were landed and buried. Tradition also says that his ship was sold here, and that his widow and children proceeded to Massachusetts, probably to Hingham, the following year, where his widow is said to have remarried.

The English tradition is that her name was Ann Elizabeth Smith. On June 9, 1668 one Anne, widow of William Knollton, petitioned for an appraisal of land in Hingham, and she has been thought by some to have been the widow of Capt. William, an opinion which is strengthened by a will of Deacon Thomas, her son, dated "12th month, 14th day, 1653," in which he makes certain bequests to his brother John, to Marjery Wilson, and to his nephew Abraham and his niece Elizabeth, and "the rest for my mother's use during her life." Although this makes it certain that his mother was then living, the petitioner Anne may have been the widow of William (1615) also named Ann Elizabeth.

- (5) John, 1633. m. Sarah Whipple, July 3, 1661.
- (6) Abraham, 1635. d. unm.
- (7) Elizabeth, 1639.

John was a shoemaker, residing in Ipswich. He became a citizen there in 1639, and a freeman June 9, 1641. On December 19, 1648, he subscribed to a fund for the pay of Major Denison to whom had been entrusted the defence of the townships against the assaults of Indian and other enemies. From the records of sales and transfers of property in Ipswich, it would appear that John had accumulated a considerable property at the time of his death, October 8, 1654/5.

Marjery Wilson was from England ; she survived him but a few months. (See Appendix for their wills, and for the inventory of the property.) The following preamble expresses the sentiments of the afore-mentioned subscribers.

"Whereas, the inhabytaynts of this Towne have engaged themselves to paye yearly on ye 10 day of December unto Major Denison soe long as he shall be their Leader the sum of four pounds seven shillings in way of gratuitye as under their hands may appear, and because it is most manifest this Sayd Sum will not be raysed unlesse some better order be taken for the same espechally in respect of the (Al—— and) change of the Inhabytaynts &c."

The Knowlton Genealogy

William was a bricklayer, and resided in Ipswich. He was a member of the First Church of Christ (Congregational), and a freeman in 1641/2. He was given commonage, with pasturage for one cow, and a share in Plum Island. On December 12, 1643, he conveyed to Edward Bragg of Ipswich a house and lot which he had purchased of John Andrews. He died in 1655, his estate being inventoried July 17, and estimated at £37-2-1. His debts amounted to £27-14-1. If his widow's name was Ann Elizabeth, she must have been living in 1668.

4 Deacon Thomas, m. Susannah —, who d. Nov. 20, 1680. And m. 2d Mary Kimball, May 17, 1682.

He was a cordwainer in Ipswich, Mass., and also shoemaker, for he is so called in a deed in which John Knowlton, his brother, and John Baker join him as grantors. He was in Ipswich in 1642, and took a prominent part in the civil affairs of the town, and was Deacon of the old First (Congregational) Church. Having no children, he sent William's "boys to school from the age of 5 to 8, and a girl from 1½ till she was married," and he also took Nathaniel, his nephew, to live with him. His nephew Thomas (4), styled "Thomas, Jr.," was given a bequest December 3, 1688, and he conveyed the bulk of his remaining property to his nephew, Nathaniel, by a deed of gift, dated December 5, 1688, for which the said Nathaniel executed a bond of even date for the faithful performance of his trust. As this will and bond expressly declare the legatees to be the children of his brother William, this evidently settles in the negative the disputed question as to whether Dea. Thomas had children. He left a silver vessel to the church, and the rest of his property as mentioned in the Appendix. Deacon Thomas d. April 23, 1692.

Mary Kimball, b. in England in 1625, was the dau. of Richard and Mary (Scott) Kimball, who sailed from Ipswich, Eng., in the ship Elizabeth, April 10, 1634. He became an inhabitant of Ipswich, Mass., on February 23, 1637. He was a wheelwright, and he became one of the representative men of the town. Mary d. November 20, 1688.

Samuel (4A) was a mariner. He is commonly supposed to have remained in England, but he certainly was in Hingham prior to September 22, 1655, on which date the inventory of his property was taken by his brother John, as administrator, and who died the following October.

5 John and Sarah Whipple had :

John was a shoemaker. He took the freeman's oath October 16, 1680. On November 30, 1670, he was drafted into the Narragansett Expedition. Sarah was the daughter of John and Sarah Whipple, her father being "feoffee of the Grammar School" in Ipswich, a Deputy to the General Court in 1640, and for a time thereafter a Deacon and Ruling Elder in the Congregational Church.

John's eyesight began to fail him at forty-two years of age, as appears from the following letter, April 5, 1675.

John's name is connected with so many real estate transactions that he was evidently a man of substance. He was, moreover, a public official, for in January, 1671,

"Y^e Selectmen having called John Brown before them, & having had comp^lt that y^e s^d John doth neglect his occasions, & spend much time and expense in ordinaries, doe now forewarn him the s^d John Brown that he doe not frequent any of the ordinaries upon penalty of the law."

Abraham Knowlton (6) was born in Ipswich. He was drafted into the Narragansett Expedition November 30, 1672, receiving £2-14s for his services. He removed from Ipswich to Salisbury in 1677, where he

He was never married. His name is spelt "Noulton." He lived for some time with his uncle Dea. Thomas.

Hannah was the second child of William and Hannah (Carter) Green, of Devonshire, England. He was a freeman in 1640. She d. at Norwich, Conn., October 24, 1708.

Thomas, Jr., was b. in Ipswich. He was a cordwainer and the jailor of the town, its jail being the second one erected in the Colony. In 1680 he is mentioned as having carried to Boston for trial one Goody Morse who had murdered Good Wife Ordway's child. There has been not a little conflict of opinion about the movements of Thomas, some having supposed that he lived and died in Ipswich, and others insisting that he removed to Norwich, Conn. This latter view is undoubtedly correct, for on June 4, 1702, Samuel Bliss and Ann, his wife, residents of Norwich, Conn., conveyed to Thomas Knowlton, cordwainer, of Ipswich, and Benjamin Baldwin, of Osborn, Mass., 550 acres of land lying between the Shetucket and Quinnebaug rivers in Norwich. This same property was subsequently sold to John Andrus, Jr., carpenter, of Ipswich, the deed being signed by Thomas, Jr., and the signatures being also witnessed by Patience, and by Thomas Knowlton, Senior. The appearance of Thomas, Jr., the jailor, in both Ipswich and Norwich is readily explained by the fact that his investments in real estate would oblige him to pass a portion of his time in each town. The Ipswich records do not show him to have been the jailor there at the time of his death in 1717, while the Connecticut records do show that at least three of his children, "Thomas y^e 3^d," Patience, and Mary, were living in the latter city, and with whom he undoubtedly spent a part of his time.

Thomas, 3d, was born in Ipswich, Mass., removed to Norwich, Conn., after Mercy's death, and bought a farm in East Haddam, Conn., March 20, 1705, in the deed of which he is designated as Thomas Knowlton, Junr., of Norwich. At the General Assembly holden at Hartford, May 9, 1706, he was commissioned lieutenant of the Train Band in East Haddam, "on the east side of the great river." This Thomas has frequently been supposed to have been the son of William (3), and the Thomas who married Marjery Goodhue has been considered the son of Thomas and Hannah Green. This point the historian has settled by finding a document of which the following is an extract (Salem Records) :

“ July 2, 1692. Thomas Knowlton, son of William Knowlton to his son Thomas, Shoemaker, gives his parlor new chamber, a part of his cellar, and the privilege of using water from the well-pump.

May 26, 1698. “ * * * that y^e sd Thomas Knowlton Senr & Thomas Knowlton Junr. his Sonne, and Benjamin Baldwin of Woburne and Mary Knowlton of sd Ipswich, children of sd Thomas Senr and y^e sd Thomas Senr as Guardian to his two other children, viz Ebenezer & Patience, for & in consideration of y^e summe of 147 pounds to them payd and Secured by (——) by Joseph Cliffe of sd. Ipswich clothier ye receipt whereof they ye sd Thomas Senr & Thomas Junr & Mary & Thomas Senr as Guardian aforesd doth acknowledge themselves therewith fully satisfied therewith & doe therefore hereby fully acquit y^e sd Cliffe for evr haue withe y^e consent of their now wives viz, Hannah y^e now wife of sd Thomas Senr and Susanna y^e now wife of sd Thomas, Junr, and Hannah y^e now wife of y^e sd Benjamin ” &c.

This, then, settles the parentage of Thomas, who m. Mercy and Susannah, and also the parentage of his sisters, Mary and Patience. Thomas 3d d. September 20, 1730.

Robert (26) was in the Canada Expedition, and “ being by God’s providence in an Exposition against a potent enemy whose eminent danger ”

etc., might make his return uncertain, he made his will April 30, 1690 (see Appendix). His company was commanded by Major Samuel Appleton.

Mary made benevolent use of her wealth, for in addition to her more private charities, she supported and endowed the chapel at "Long Society" which she and her husband had built for the convenience of many who lived too remotely from the parent church to attend its services with regularity. Mary died March 9, 1749, and her many virtues are recited in an "Elegy" or funeral lamentation very common in those days. It was probably composed by her pastor, and it comprises fifty-six four-line verses printed in heavy black type. This worthy couple are buried in the cemetery hard by, and their epitaphs are still perfectly legible. Mary's will was probated August 1, 1749, in which she bequeathed to Nathaniel Giddings £2.10, James Geer of Groton, £2.10, to her granddaughters, Mary and Sarah Giddings, and Zipporah Geer, £100 each, and to her beloved son Joseph the residue of her property.

He and his wife Hannah were received into the Ashford church from that at Sutton, December 11, 1726, and he became a prominent leader in ecclesiastical affairs.

On January 7, 1762 he was chosen deacon (the duties of which office he had for many years discharged), but “he offered such reasons for being dropped, as age, inability for the service, etc., that he was excused.”

He was repeatedly chosen as a committee to examine candidates for the pulpit “as to their principles and discipline,” and his strong religious feeling and patriotic ardor seem to have been inherited by his descendants, who were firm supporters and loyal members of the Ashford church, and among the first to respond to the call to arms.

Joseph was born in Ipswich, Mass., from which place he removed to Shrewsbury, in 1733. He was admitted to the Church there, with Abigail, that year. He was a farmer and weaver, and it marks the superstitious spirit of that day that he was ploughing in the field, when Molly G., a reputed witch, came to him soliciting some special favor. This being denied, she left him in a towering rage, and for the rest of the day the oxen stood still in the furrows, refusing to move, a circumstance which confirmed prevailing superstitions.

In his will probated September 2, 1760, he leaves to each of his children except Joseph, £28 :

“ To my son Joseph I give and bequeath all my lands, meadows and buildings in said town and elsewhere, and all my stock and husbandry tools and tackling. Furthermore, my will is that . . . my daughter Abigail shall have a good comfortable room and fire wood, either in my own dwelling or my son Joseph's, so long as she shall live a single woman."

HON. LUKE KNOWLTON,

the fifth child and second son of Deacon Ezekiel, was born in Shrewsbury, November 4, 1738. From his youth up he displayed those traits of character that made him so conspicuous a figure years afterwards in his adopted State. Ambitious and enterprising by nature, he early fitted himself to become by education and observation a leader of men in the stirring events that lay before him. When but twenty-one years old he enlisted in the regular service of the Continental Army, and in Captain Fay's company, of Shrewsbury, and served during the French and Indian War in 1759 at Crown Point, Fort Ticonderoga, and other points. From a journal of each day's events kept by him with pathetic simplicity of style we get a graphic picture of the sufferings and privations to which the patriotic soldiers of that troublous time were subjected. The cover of his journal bears the following inscription.

" Luke Knowlton
His Book
Bought att Bostown, May 25
Anno Domini 1759.

Luke Knowlton, His Hand
wrote at the Landing Place, Near Ticonderoga Fort—
July 26th Anno Domini, 1759.

Luke Knowlton
His Book
Shrewsbury June 3, 1759."

This journal covers a period from June 4th, to November 18th, the last entry of which is :

" Lord's Day. I travelled to Shrewsbury, home to my father's and found my honored parents well."

Knowlton writes of the avidity with which they ate raw turnips and, when they could get it, raw pork, and at one time they were in such extremities that they killed and ate one of their pack horses. When their time of enlistment had expired, the officers refused to give the men their discharge, whereupon Luke Knowlton gathered two hundred of them on the parade ground, armed and loaded with their personal effects, determined to assert their rights. The officers threatened to fire upon them, but the men were calmly resolute, and the officers were obliged to yield. Knowlton's sense of personal rights and his firmness in defending those rights, were made the more effective by a quiet dignity and judicious reserve that marked his subsequent career in public life.

At the close of the war he and a few associates petitioned the Government for a grant of 20,000 acres of land, and subsequently for 37,000 more, in what was then known as Gonchester, now Brookfield and Fairfield, beginning at a line twenty-three miles east of Lake Champlain, on the northwest bank of the river Le Moyle. The petition was granted, the tract was named Knowlton's Gore, and thus was laid the foundation of Knowlton's subsequent prosperity.

HON. LUKE KNOWLTON,
Judge of the Supreme Court,
Newfane, Vt., 1738-1810.

He married Sarah, daughter of Ephraim Holland, of Shrewsbury, January 5, 1760, and removed to Newfane, Vt., February, 1773, where thirteen families had already settled. At the organization of the town in the following year, he was chosen Town Clerk, holding the position for fourteen years. Knowlton was from the day of his removal to Newfane facile princeps, for he represented the town in the State Legislature during seven terms, was a member of the Old Council from 1787 to 1793, Judge of the Windham County Court, and was elected Judge of the Supreme Court in 1786. In published sketches and histories of Newfane it is freely admitted that the town owed its original prosperity and subsequent importance chiefly to the sagacity, enterprise, and ability of Judge Knowlton. His rare perception gave him an intuitive knowledge of men, and his liberality to the poor, gravity of deportment, suavity of manner, and personal godliness won for him the general appellation of "Saint Luke." * He gave the land for a public Common, and contributed largely towards the erection of the first court-house and jail in Newfane.

As Judge Knowlton had been a staunch Loyalist during the ante-revolutionary period, he received from the British Government a liberal grant of land in Lower Canada, upon a portion of which is now located the town of Sherbrooke. This, with the other fact of his well-known Tory sentiments, placed him under the ban of suspicion, even after he had given in his adherence to the Government of Vermont, and he was so fiercely threatened by his neighbors that he fled from Massachusetts, where he was then living, to Vermont. On his return he had an experience of which the records of the Supreme Court held at Westminster, February term 1784, are the evidence. The case is known as that of Freeman vs. Prouty : an indictment for burglary.

Although Knowlton had abundantly proved his loyalty to the new Government and order of things, the "Yorkers" believed him to be still secretly negotiating with the British Government, and in its pay. So stoutly did they continue their charge of treason that Congress in secret session, November 27, 1782, ordered his arrest, and, as already stated, he fled for safety. Returning the following year, he was kidnapped one November night by Francis Prouty, Thomas Whipple, Johnathan Dunkely, John and Darwin Wheeler, and others, "armed with pistols, clubs, guns, swords and bayonets," and conveyed beyond the border. General Fletcher under whom Knowlton had fought in 1759 ordered the militia to assemble to the rescue, but the fearless return of Knowlton made further operations unnecessary. The rioters were subsequently tried and convicted, and Prouty as ringleader was fined £30, with costs and forty days' imprisonment.

It would appear that his traducers left no stain upon his reputation, for he was chosen Deacon of his church, and it fell to him to "set the psalm," reading off two lines at a time for the congregation to sing. He died December 12, 1810. His wife died September 1, 1797.

Johnathan was b. in Ipswich, and resided for a time in Walpole (Malden) Mass., from which place they removed to Damariscotta, Me., in 1787. After a brief stay here, Johnathan pushed on to the Sandy River, a tributary of the Kennebec, and effected a settlement on Lot 17, where he built a log house. There being no mills on the river at this early date, Johnathan was obliged to shoulder his bag of corn, and carry it through an unbroken wilderness to the mill at Winthrop, a round trip of fifty-two miles, with only a pocket compass, or spotted trees, as a guide, and involving an absence of a week from the isolated log house in which his wife remained entirely alone with her infant son Johnathan, Jr. The great freshet of October 22, 1785, drove the family from their rude quarters, and they were with difficulty rescued, being taken out of the top window, and ferried across the river to the house of his brother-in-law. He subsequently erected mills at Farmington Falls, and, although they were swept away by floods, his indomitable energy and perseverance revived his fortunes, and at his death, November 5, 1819, he was a principal owner of real estate and milling property. His humane and generous disposition endeared him to all classes, and he passed the latter years of his life in the serene enjoyment of public confidence and neighborly regard. He was an ardent Methodist, and, with Stephen Titcomb, he was mainly instrumental in building the first meeting-house at Farmington Falls.

He bought a small farm in a very rugged spot, the cultivation of which was so difficult that he left it, and removed to Belchertown, where the rest of his children were born. He suffered from a sunstroke which clouded his mind exactly one year to a day, after which he recovered his usual mental powers.

LIEUT. DANIEL KNOWLTON was baptized in the West Parish of Boxford, Mass., December 31, 1738. He was but two years old when his father removed to Ashford, Conn. Daniel's early training was calculated to have a powerful influence upon his military career afterwards, and it probably laid the foundation for some of those deeds of heroism which have made his name revered among his descendants. When only nineteen years old he enlisted in the colonial regiments for service in the French and Indian War, together with his brother Thomas. From the very first he distinguished himself for bravery and daring, particularly as a scout, being often sent in command of small parties to reconnoitre in the forests. No duty connected with the long and bloody wars upon the frontiers required more skill, or tact, than that of scouting, where the slightest indiscretion might betray the venturesome explorer to the cruelty of the savage. On one of these occasions, while serving in Capt. John Slapp's company, Phineas Lyman's 1st Connecticut regiment, in Lord Loudon's expedition to Fort Edward, between the 15th of March and the 17th of October, 1757, Daniel saved the life of his companion and friend, Israel Putnam, who, in venturing into the dense forest outside the ramparts of Fort Edward, was attacked by an Indian who was about to tomahawk him. Knowlton came to his friend's relief, and brought down the redskin by a timely shot from his musket. This incident explains the life-long friendship which existed between Putnam and Daniel Knowlton. The bravest troopers and fiercest fighters in the bloody encounters of the French and Indian War within New York State, were men of Connecticut regiments. Knowlton did most of his fighting in this campaign in Northern New York, in and around the ramparts and forts of Fort Edward, Ticonderoga, and that vicinity.

In June, 1758, he served in Col. Eleazer Fitch's 3d Connecticut regiment, and Capt. Jedediah Fay's company, at Crown Point. About this time Knowlton captured three men belonging to a gang of bloodthirsty desperadoes, whose numerous atrocities had made them as odious as they were terrible. With a small force on hostile territory, it was unsafe either to retain or dismiss the prisoners, and the captors decided that the crimes of the offenders entitled them to halters, and that there must be no delay. Halters were accordingly made from the bark of hickory saplings, by Knowlton's orders, from which the culprits were soon dangling between heaven and earth. From May 7, 1761, to December 30, 1761, Daniel served as a sergeant in Capt. Robert Durkee's company, Phineas Lyman's Connecticut regiment, and from March 17, 1762, to December 4, 1762, in Capt. Hugh Ledlie's company, Lyman's regiment, the above companies being mustered and serving in the Crown Point Expedition. The original muster-rolls, showing his services in these campaigns, are on file in the State Library, at Hartford, Conn. It is not known positively that Daniel rendered service in the Havana expedition, as most of the muster-rolls of these regiments were lost, or destroyed. We have very good reasons, however, for believing that he did, as we have proof of his brother Thomas's service there, and also proof that they served side by side in nearly every campaign of the French and Indian War.

Upon returning to Connecticut, and to Ashford, in 1763, he m. November 3d, Elizabeth Farnham, the daughter of Manassah Farnham, of Windham. Elizabeth was b. at Windham, March 10, 1742. Her mother was Keziah Ford, daughter of Joseph Ford, a brave soldier in King Philip's War. Daniel's wife, Elizabeth, was the granddaughter of Henry Farnham and Phebe (Russell) Farnham, and great-granddaughter of Ralph Farnham and Sarah Sterling. Ralph, father of said Ralph, m. Elizabeth Holt, and was sixth son of Sir John Farnham of Quorndam, County Leicester, England, who lived in the reign of Edward I. His arms are registered in the Heralds' College.

Daniel now enjoyed a brief respite from the hardships of war, and turned his attention to the affairs of his home and family. His appearance at this time is said to have been that of a very tall, wiry man, slightly stooping shoulders, high brow, prominent nose, serious, though gentle features, and blue eyes, in one of which there was a slight cast, the result of a laceration in the French War while chasing a band of savages. A projecting bramble, or prickly branch, tore the eye partially out of the socket, but the indomitable will of the soldier paid little heed to the annoyance, and he pushed on, disregarding the pain. His light brown hair was powdered and dressed after the fashion of the period. The gentleness and humanity of the man are illustrated by the following incident, which has erroneously been ascribed by some to his younger brother Thomas. One day, as Daniel was riding past the Presbyterian Church at Ashford, he noticed a large crowd congregated about the whipping-post, planted in the vicinity according to the harsh custom of the day. Upon inquiry, he learned that a culprit was to be flogged for non-attendance at church and non-payment of dues. When the sentence was read preparatory to laying on the stripes, observing that the usual clause was omitted requiring the stripes to be applied to the bare back, he jumped from his horse and threw his own coat over the shoulders of the culprit, thus mitigating the force of the blows.

Four sons and a daughter were born to Daniel and Elizabeth during this temporary period of domestic peace and happiness at Ashford, but the clouds of Revolution were gathering in the Colonies, and at the first call to arms Knowlton promptly responded.

It is related that the night before the Putnam men marched to the relief of Boston, "Old Put," as he was called, was noticed to leave his house and silently walk over to a field adjacent, and there look towards Ashford for some little time, shading his eyes with his hand. Being followed by a neighbor, and being asked for whom he was looking, the old General ejaculated, "Gad, Zounds, had I only Daniel Knowlton to take with me, I'd lick Hell itself." To this "Lexington Alarm" Daniel responded by leaving his plough in the furrow, like Cincinnatus of old, though he was, probably, not at the battle of Bunker Hill, and the precise nature of his service at this date is matter of tradition rather than of history. He was, however, one of the very first in the field, and was commissioned Ensign of Col. John Chester's Connecticut regiment, Sixth Battalion, Wadsworth brigade, Capt. Reuben Marcy's company, in June, 1776. Stationed with this regiment at Flatbush Pass, August 26th, he participated in the memorable battle of Long Island, August 27, 1776, where his entire regiment narrowly escaped capture.*

* The "Espadata," or ensign's staff, which was carried by Knowlton, is in the possession at the present time of one of his great-grandsons, Mr. Miner Knowlton, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and the musket which Sergeant Knowlton carried during the French and Indian War and the first year of the Revolution, and which saved the life of Putnam, is now in possession of his great-great-grandson, Mr. William Herrick Griffith, of Albany, N. Y.

Subsequently he was detached from Chester's regiment and Wadsworth's brigade, and after the battle of Long Island assigned to Knowlton's Rangers, which his brother Thomas commanded. He participated with the Rangers at the battle of Harlem Heights, 16th September, 1776, at which place, and during which engagement, his brother was slain. It was related by Trumbull of Connecticut, an intimate friend of Col. Thomas Knowlton, that upon his death the news was carried to his brother Daniel, who was fighting bravely in another part of the field. Upon hearing the sad news he exclaimed, "We will retrieve my brother's loss," and before the day was over the loss was partially retrieved by that glorious victory at Harlem Heights.

When Col. Thomas Knowlton led the Ashford company to the American headquarters near Boston, shortly after the battle of Lexington, General Putnam, the early friend of Daniel, asked the Colonel where his brother Daniel was. Being informed that he had gone in another direction, the General remarked: "I am sorry that you did not bring him with you; he alone is worth half a company. Such is his courage and lack of fear, I could order him into the mouth of a loaded cannon, and he would go."

After the battle of Harlem Heights Knowlton returned to Chester's regiment, and participated in the battle of White Plains, N. Y., October 28, 1776. For bravery on the field, he was appointed by the State Assembly Second Lieutenant of one of eight battalions of troops ordered to be raised. He again rejoined Knowlton's Rangers on the Harlem lines after the White Plains engagement, continuing with them and being in the thick of the fight at Fort Washington, where, with the entire garrison, he was made a prisoner. For about two years he was in the hands of the enemy, being confined a portion of the time in the old prison-ship Fersey, anchored in Wallabout Bay, during which period he met with abuse, privation, and persecution. On one occasion, it is related, while he was on the Fersey, pacing back and forth, with his eyes lowered to the deck, one of his jailers, a British officer, pompously asked him why he did not hold up his head like a man and a soldier? Knowlton quietly replied:

"In passing through fields of grain, Sir, I have noticed that the valuable ears or heads bow toward the earth, only the empty and worthless stand erect."

The officer thereupon showed appreciation of the answer by bowing his own head, and leaving the prisoner to pursue his meditations undisturbed. The infamy and inhuman treatment of American patriots confined on the Fersey and other prison-ships are too well known to need repetition. The indignities and cruelties to which Knowlton was subjected during these terrible months were never forgotten. The very name of "Briton" fired his soul ever after. Long years after the war, when at his home in Ashford, he was accustomed to attend Divine Service at a Congregational church at Westford. One Sunday when the minister gave out a hymn having for its refrain "Give Britain praise," Lieutenant Knowlton immediately rose up in his seat, and requested that this hymn should be omitted, and another sung in its stead ; but the minister paying no attention to his request, and the choir beginning to sing, the old soldier marched deliberately out of church, saying that he could not worship with a congregation that "gave Britain praise for anything." And he never entered that church again.

While imprisoned by the British, in an old meeting-house on Long Island, for the space of four days he was allowed neither food nor drink. At length a compassionate woman, hearing of his condition, concealed food and a bottle of water in her clothing, and prevailed upon the guard to allow her to visit the meeting-house. She found Knowlton almost in a dying condition, and but for her timely relief he would soon have perished. It was about this time that Lieutenant Colonel Selah Hart, of Farmington, presented a petition to the Connecticut Assembly for aid in behalf of Ethan Allen, Daniel Knowlton, and a few others, which was granted.

This quaint old document, alluding to our men as "captivated by their enemies," is preserved in the Archives of Connecticut to this day. The petition reads as follows :

" Whereas Lieut. Colonel Selah Hart of Farmington hath preferred his memorial to this Assembly, for himself and about thirty-eight other continental officers captivated by the enemies of the United States of America, and confined by them on Long Island, showing to this Assembly that said officers and their families are reduced to great distress by means of said officers being held in captivity, the most of them ever since the 15th of September last, since which they have received no wages or allowances from the United States or either of them, and that they have spent all their money, are considerably in debt, and have no means of subsistence ; that they are unable to procure hard money ; that paper money or bills will not pay them ; praying for relief etc. as per memorial and a list of said officers' names lodged in the files of this Assembly appears.

" Resolved by this Assembly. That the Committee of the Pay-Table be and they are hereby directed to adjust and settle said officers' accounts, when produced to them, and to allow to them, the same wages since their captivity as was allowed to officers of their rank in the continental army at the time they were captured ; and that the committee pay to them, or to said Selah Hart for their use, the balance due to each of said officers or such part thereof as on consideration of their case may appear necessary for their relief : Provided such evidence shall be produced as shall satisfy said committee that said officers have not received their wages already. And said committee are directed if possible to make said payment, or considerable part thereof, in hard money, and for that purpose to draw on the Treasurer of this State for the same, or bills of credit to exchange for the same, and the Treasurer is directed to pay the same accordingly ; and said committee are to charge the sum so paid to the United States, and transmit an account thereof to General Washington with the names and offices of the persons to whom, or for whom, the same is paid, and the Battalion and Company to which they belonged, as soon as they can ascertain the same, and request the General to give orders that said sum may be ordered and paid to the Treasurer of this State for the use of this State."

Upon being exchanged with other prisoners, Daniel was assigned as Lieutenant to Capt. Joshua Bottom's company, Lieutenant-Col. Levi Well's regiment, and participated with them in the battle of Horseneck, 9th December, 1780, where he was again taken prisoner. Upon being released he was given brief leave of absence to visit his home in Ashford, soon after which he enlisted again, being commissioned First Lieutenant.

He served with that rank in Capt. Benjamin Durkee's company of Matrosses in the Provisional Regiment stationed at Fort Trumbull, New London, Ct., from July 16, 1782, until the war was ended and the army disbanded. He was given occasional leave of absence.

That Knowlton did not receive the military rank which was his due was owing to the fact that he was a prisoner of war much of the time, and chiefly because he refused advancement on one or two occasions, preferring to serve in that station where he could serve his country best. Bold, stern, and intrepid as a lion in the battle-field, he was retiring, non-assertive, in private life, and inclined to belittle his achievements. Nothing was more distasteful to his mind than display or ostentation.

When a descendant had read the simple inscription on his grave-stone in the Westford Hill cemetery ("A Patriot of the Revolution"), he turned to one of Knowlton's oldest kinsmen and inquired why a more fitting monument had not been erected over the grave of the hero. The answer was characteristic of the Knowltons :

"The best acknowledgement of a man's services to his race is rendered when his countrymen demand with surprise and wonderment why his deeds are not more publicly appreciated."

After the war was over he retired to private life at Ashford, and occupied himself with the humble pursuits of his farm life. He met with a severe affliction in the death of his wife Elizabeth, on June 1, 1786. He married a second time, 24th April, 1788, Rebecca Fenton of Willington, by whom he had two sons, Erastus Fenton and Marvin. He is also said to have performed military service in the war of 1812. He met his death from the effects of a fall in the barn attached to his farm at Ashford, 31st May, 1825. His grave-stone in the cemetery at Westford bears the following inscription :

COLONEL THOMAS KNOWLTON,

the seventh child of William and Martha Pinder Knowlton, was born in Boxford, Mass., about November 22, 1740. Like his elder brother Daniel, the songs to which his cradle was rocked were the patriotic hymns of a people called daily to defend their liberties, and the staple of current conversation was furnished by personal adventure and military exploits. The various French and Indian wars had left the colonies but brief intervals of repose for many years, and the New England farmer was as skilful with the musket as with the plough. When scarcely sixteen years of age, Thomas Knowlton had accompanied his elder brother Daniel, the famous scout, in the campaigns which were terminated by the conquest of Canada, and in August, 1758, he fought in the battle of Wood Creek, in which he had hair-breadth escapes, now outwitting the cunning of his savage foe, and again, by strength and agility, making him bite the dust. Nature had cast him, like his elder brother, in a military mould, and set her prophetic seal on him from birth. More than six feet in height, sinewy, erect, handsome as an Apollo, he was a veritable Anakim in physical presence, and commanded the admiration of all who knew him. Trumbull, the great painter, who enlisted in the War of Independence for the express purpose of leaving on his glowing canvas the accurate features of its heroes, caught the gleam of patriotic inspiration that lighted up Knowlton's face at Bunker Hill, and from that faithful portraiture we can readily construct the actual soldier.

In the capture of Ticonderoga, July, 1759, several Knowltons had their honorable share, Luke, Ezekiel, and Benjamin of Massachusetts, and Thomas of Ashford with them, and when the siege of Havana was ended by the surrender of the city, Thomas was one of the victors whom neither war nor disease had mastered.

He had married, three years before, Anna, daughter of Sampson Keyes of Ashford, with whom, after the capture of Havana, he settled down into the uneventful life of an average Connecticut farmer. As David was fitted for the leadership of Israel amid the solitude of the Judæan hills, so was Thomas Knowlton the better prepared for the struggle of '75 and '76 by that contest with the untamed forces of nature which an Ashford farm necessitated. Whoever visits the old town to-day will be as much impressed by its comparative sterility as he will be captivated by its rugged beauty. Unless this region have degenerated since William of Boxford transplanted here his domestic vine and fig-tree, the Knowltons must have found but a stubborn soil, fruitful in rock, sand, and straggling vine, but yielding slowly to persistent cultivation. That they supported families of generous numbers here is presumptive proof that they owned both fair and fertile acres, but the general appearance of the old town is that of a hard field in which to earn one's bread by farming. Thomas Knowlton spent here sixteen years of quiet domestic joy and useful industry. His taste for arms, however, had been whetted in the four campaigns of his earlier life, and when a local militia force was formed he was naturally elected ensign, 3d Company, 1st Regiment. In 1761 he joined the 10th Company, Capt. Robert Durkee, and in the following year was made its 2d lieutenant, Capt. Hugh Ledlie, commanding. In civil affairs he was equally and early prominent, being made a Selectman of the town at the unprecedented age of thirty-three, and stories have been related, again and again, illustrative of a walk and conversation that made him honored for his integrity, admired for his personality, and beloved for his humanity.

A false rumor of British insolence brought him and his company promptly to arms in September, 1774, and when the touch of fate gave immortality to Lexington and Concord the following year, Knowlton was in his element. The captaincy of the Ashford company was vacant, and he was chosen by acclamation. So spontaneous was the patriotic uprising that, when the volunteers poured into the camp at Pomfret, only one fifth were considered necessary, and the Ashford company being at once recognized as superior in material and tactics, it was promptly drafted into the 5th Regiment, and before night was on its way to Cambridge. Subsequently, this company was reorganized and increased to two hundred men by members from other companies, with Capt. Knowlton in command, and on June 16, 1775, they marched to Breed's Hill for their first baptism of blood. Against Knowlton's remonstrance, and in the face of his more intelligent judgment, Gen. Israel Putnam had decided to occupy an untenable position exposed to the enemy's batteries, and that could readily be captured by the land and naval forces which the British would inevitably combine. Knowlton was so much a soldier that he obeyed even a suicidal order of his superior, and occupied a small redoubt near the Mystic River. Anticipating the tactics of the British General Howe, he constructed a stone and rail fence parallel with an already existing one a little back of the redoubt, filled the space between the two with hay, and thus prepared for the onset of the red-coats. Behind this extemporized breastwork over which the British made merry, less than one thousand raw, imperfectly disciplined, and scantily equipped Americans awaited the very flower of British soldiery several times their own numbers. When the fight was over, the British had lost 1054 killed and wounded, the Americans but 449. Knowlton commanded the Connecticut forces, handling them with such skill that only three of the Ashford troops were killed. He saved the retreat from becoming a rout, and his heroic valor was the more to be praised because he fought against what he saw from the first were overwhelming odds. A ball striking his gun curved it into the form of a semi-circle, but he grasped another, and without hat or coat led on his men to desperate deeds of valor. For his part in this memorable and initial battle in open field for independence, Knowlton was presented by an admiring friend with a gold-laced hat, a sash, and a gorget, the last being now in the possession of a relative, Mr. Geo. T. Chaffee, Rutland, Vt.

Knowlton's record at Bunker Hill commended him at once to the regard of Washington, with whom he was ever after a great favorite. As evidence of this, the first countersign given by Washington to the army after Bunker Hill was "Knowlton," and the Ashford company became virtually the bodyguard of the Commander-in-chief. A night march to Charlestown and the capture of five English officers under the very eyes of the enemy, gave Knowlton both diversion and reputation. When the 20th Regiment of the line was organized, Knowlton became its major and, immediately after, its acting colonel and paymaster. He was appointed Lieut.-Colonel, August 12, 1776, and fifteen days later, at the disastrous battle of Long Island, he saved, by a timely and masterly retreat, his regiment from capture. Soon after, the famous corps known as "Knowlton's Rangers" was formed from picked men of five Connecticut, one Rhode Island, and two Massachusetts regiments, for special, delicate, and hazardous duty.

This corps was attached to the person of General Washington, receiving its orders directly from him, and appealing to those only who found satisfaction in "leading a forlorn hope."

On September 16, 1776, the battle of Harlem Heights was fought, and the first victory in the open field was won by the Americans, despite the overwhelming numbers of the British. In the thick of the fight Knowlton fell, mortally wounded.

The force under his command had mistaken the order of their commander, at which it is said Knowlton turned pale, fearing the day was lost. The splendid courage of our troops, however, retrieved the disaster, though at a terrible price. A ball pierced the brave Colonel, and he lived just long enough to give to his son Frederic, who was a private in his father's corps, the last benediction, and to his country and the world the assurance that he died content to buy, even with his life, the precious treasure of human freedom.

It is one of the compensations in human life that, sooner or later, posterity will do the honored dead justice. In the General Orders of the following day, Washington declared that "the brave and gallant Colonel Knowlton was an honor to any country." General Reed wrote :

"Our greatest loss was a brave officer from Connecticut, whose name and spirit ought to be immortalized, one Colonel Knowlton. I assisted him off, and when gasping in the agonies of death all his inquiry was if we had drove the enemy."

Capt. Stephen Brown, his successor, adds more explicitly :

"I took hold of him and asked if he were badly wounded. He told me he was, but, says he, 'I do not value my life if we do but get the day.' He desired me by all means to keep up this flank. He seemed as unconcerned and calm as though nothing had happened to him."

And history, calmly writing out this verdict, pronounces him one of the noblest soldiers ever claimed by any country, and whose death cut off a man otherwise destined to be a great general. Original letters now in possession of the Hon. P. H. Woodward, Hartford, Conn., express the sober convictions of such eminent men as Colonel Burr, General Dearborn, and others, all of whom paid high tribute to the worth and virtues of the dead hero. In his own town there was a great lamentation, for the whole community joined their tears to those of the disconsolate widow and eight fatherless children. Colonel Knowlton was buried with military honors on the field of battle, 143d Street, N. Y. Not until September, 1893, did even a mural tablet indicate that the great metropolis, for whose safety he had given his life, remembered and honored him. On November 13, 1895, his native State paid formal tribute to the memory of one of her greatest sons. A superb bronze statue was then unveiled in the Capitol grounds at Hartford, to tell the citizen of the present and the future what a modest headstone in old Ashford has long been repeating,—the glory of self-sacrifice for God and Country. The statue was erected by the State of Connecticut, largely through the efforts of the Hon. P. H. Woodward, of Hartford, and Dr. J. Knowlton

STATUE OF COL. THOMAS KNOWLTON,
Capitol Grounds, Hartford, Conn.

Marcy, of Windsor, Conn. At the ceremony of unveiling, the Hon. Charles Dudley Warner, Chairman of the Commission of Sculpture, delivered an appropriate and eloquent address, in which he declared that "Colonel Knowlton was a great man. Judged by what he did, and by what his rare talents promised, I doubt if the State has produced a greater military genius, or a more unselfish patriot. The official recognition of his services and of his great qualities comes late; but his fame is permanent, and it will increase, for it is of the sort of heroism that the people take to heart long after 'the flags are folded and the drums silent.'" The historic address—a notable one—was delivered by the Hon. P. H. Woodward, and was printed and widely circulated.

The inscription on the modest tombstone in the old cemetery at Warrenville, Conn., reads thus :

STEPHEN KNOWLTON

resided in Chatham, Conn. He served in the Revolutionary War from May 8 to December 18, 1775, as a private in the 5th Company, Colonel Spencer's 3d. Regiment Connecticut Militia. His widow received a pension in 1844. In 1804 Stephen and his family removed to Morgan, Ashtabula County, Ohio, making the long journey in an ox-cart. His daughter, Diodemia, was followed by her ardent lover, Moses Camp, overtaken at Albany, and married and settled in Winsted, Conn. Stephen built the first frame house in Morgan, and lived in it to a good old age. He d. May 30, 1830. Diodemia was of Huguenot descent and was born in New Hartford, Conn. She was a woman of remarkable energy of body and mind, and she imparted her force of character to her children. The latter portion of her life was passed in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wright, where she died at the advanced age of 94.

Their son Calvin located near them, and his house was the favorite stopping-place for travellers on their way to the lake to procure salt.

Stephen, Jr., lived near them on lot 125, where he made a clearing and planted an orchard, removing subsequently to lot 417, where he lived for the rest of his life.

Samuel was unfortunate in his domestic relations, a fact which seemed to interfere with the permanence and prosperity of the rest of the family, for he removed not long after marriage, and his record is unknown.

Deborah's husband, Caleb Chapman, came to Morgan, Ohio, in 1804, bought land of Stephen Knowlton, and paid for it by "chopping" and by clearing certain acres of land. He built for himself a dwelling-house, barn, and cider-mill, exchanging his property afterward for hemlock land, which furnished him a new and lucrative business in tanning and lumbering, and at his death he left his widow and ten children in affluent circumstances.

Robert was born at Sharon Springs, Conn., February 10, 1759. When but seventeen years old he enlisted in the army, serving during most of the Revolutionary War. He was at Fort Edward and witnessed the massacre of Jane McCrea, in the battles of Stillwater and Saratoga, and at Valley Forge with Washington. His son changed the name to Nolton, a change suggested, perhaps, by a spelling of the name which was at one time adopted by his English ancestors. His descendants resumed the former spelling a few years since. Robert removed to Saratoga Co., N. Y., either to Greenfield or Milton, as is shown by a deed dated October 28, 1793, in which he spells his name Knowlton. He also lived in Fairfield, N. Y. He d. in Boonville, N. He served during the whole of that year, and reenlisted the next year, having the rank of Sergeant. His health being impaired he returned home to Canaan, N. H., in 1777, and after recovery he enlisted on the Privateer Fancy, Captain Lee, commanding. The family consisted of Richard Woodward (b. 1589), his wife Rose, and two sons, and it is a curious fact that among their fellow passengers were other families who also intermarried with the Knowltons in various parts of New England.

Abner resided in Willington (now Enfield), and Ashford, Conn., and was the ancestor of Dr. Ashbel Woodward the biographer of Gen. DANIEL KNOWLTON.

Daniel Knowlton (Daniel Knowlton 2d as he was known until the death of Lieut. Daniel Knowlton, and in later years known by his neighbors as Deacon Knowlton) was the son of Abraham Knowlton and Molly Knox, and was born in Ashford, Conn., March 17, 1781, on premises long owned and occupied by his father, and previous thereto by his grandfather Robert Knowlton. His early educational facilities were meagre, being such as were afforded by the district school which he attended during the winter months, assisting in the labor of the farm in summer. On November 24, 1803, he married Hannah Knowlton, daughter of Lieut. Daniel Knowlton, and settled down as a farmer on premises adjoining his father's farm, where all of his children were born, and where he lived until his death in 1852. The title and occupancy of this large and productive farm have continued in certain descendants to the present time.

From early manhood he took a lively interest in the welfare of the town, and was often elected to office, always serving with credit. He served on Board of Relief seven times; Selectman, three times; "Agent of town to commence and defend suits," twice; Member of the General Assembly, three times; Judge of Probate, seven times; beside filling several minor offices.

He early became a member of the Baptist Church located in the west part of the town, organized in 1775 largely through his father's efforts, and in which he took a decided interest; giving it liberal financial support; serving on the Society Committee eighteen times, and as Deacon for thirty years, or more.

He was an earnest and exemplary member of this church, and a man of genial disposition, sound judgment, and sterling traits of character. The children of Daniel and Hannah were all of marked ability and character, and while the women naturally took a less conspicuous part in life they inherited the sterling qualities of their parents.

HANNAH KNOWLTON, WIFE OF DANIEL, was the daughter of Lieut. Daniel Knowlton, a Revolutionary hero, by his first wife Elizabeth Farnham, and she was a niece of Col. Thomas Knowlton, and an aunt of Gen'l Nathaniel Lyon, who fell at the battle of Wilson's Creek, Missouri, in the War of the Rebellion.

She was born at Ashford, Conn., April 19, 1783, and married Daniel Knowlton, Esq., November 26, 1803. She died December 24, 1854:

It is said by her descendants that her early life was severe, as the father, Lieut. Daniel, was fighting, or a prisoner, during the Revolutionary War, and the farm was consequently neglected. The women of those days had much to do caring for the family, and beside the household labor, did spinning, weaving, and making of silk to provide for daily needs, and to exchange for the necessaries that could not be raised on the farm.

They found their highest glory in the home, and in the training of the sturdy race of men to whom they gave birth. Hannah's life was quiet and unassuming, and full of love and devotion to her family and friends.

She was a woman of a keen and bright mind, affectionate disposition, and generous to the poor, as far as her means would allow, always feeding some unfortunate outcast. "Aunt Hannah" as she was always called by neighbors, was very fond of their children as well as of her own, and beloved by them in return. The children called her "Grandma Deacon," and were fond of her sweetmeats, which she freely dispensed.

Moses Harrington's company, Colonel Dyke's regiment, and was stationed at Dorchester from December until the following May. Re-enlisting in Captain Inglesbury's company, Col. Job Cushing's regiment, he served as corporal and musician in the campaign against General Burgoyne. He was present at the surrender of that General, and heard him insultingly call General Gates "Granny Gates," to which the latter replied :

"I will own the title, for I have just delivered Great Britain of ten thousand men."

Knowlton again enlisted and marched to Rutland, to Enfield, Conn., and Providence, R. I., with several divisions of prisoners, after which he was honorably

CHAPTER III.

The Canada Knowltons

SOON after the cessation of hostilities between the American Colonies and the mother country, and the establishment of the United States as a separate and independent nation, the government of Great Britain offered by public proclamation a free grant of land to all who remained of the Tory party, if they would leave the States and settle in Canada. This offer was prompted by the evident belief that the new and infant nation was but one of those numerous political experiments which have ambitiously struggled into life, and almost as quickly died out of it. Among the considerable numbers who shared in this sober conviction of the English Government, was Judge Luke Knowlton, of Newfane, Vt. His Tory sentiments will excite less surprised comment when it is remembered that he lived near the northern boundary line, and that contiguity to one's neighbors effaces, more or less, sharp lines of distinction and separation. The American nation was not only an experiment, it was doubly so for being a republican one. Judge Knowlton was too sensible and too honorable a man not to accept the logic of arms, even though results might not be permanent. Moreover, he was no longer a young man, and he felt unequal to a stout grapple with the untamed forces of the great northern wilderness, in a desperate effort to found a new home. His children, however, he encouraged to take advantage of the offer of the English Government, and thus secure a permanent home and influence. Silas, the second son and third child, was the first to accept the parental advice. He had married, in 1786, Sarah Holbrook, the sister of his brother-in-law, John Holbrook, by whom he had born to him Paul, then but nine years old, and Luke, an infant. He "took up" a section of land in the County of Brome, Province of Quebec, the tract now known as the township of Stukely, and then returned to Newfane for his family. Through his influence, a neighbor, one Whitney, with wife and infant daughter, accompanied the Knowltons on their trying journey to Canada.

When the little band of emigrants reached the boundary line of Stukely, the two women engaged in an amicable dispute as to which should have the honor of being the first white female to settle in the new township. Mr. Whitney settled the matter by suddenly lifting his child in his arms, and depositing her on the farther side of the line. The formation of a township in Canada at this particular time was regulated by somewhat peculiar provisions. The area was one hundred square miles, and forty settlers, called "Associates" were required, their names to be entered in the "Letters Patent" from the Crown, and all of them to go into actual residence.

There was something of Greek flavor in the policy which conferred peculiar privileges on the fathers of male children, and Quebec imitated Athens in its prudent forecast of its civil and military welfare. Eastern Canada was fortunate in having among its pioneers such people as these Knowltons. Silas came of a sturdy stock that had rounded and hardened its muscle and sharpened its mental faculties in frontier life and border warfare. The boy had sung, many a time, the battle songs that stirred the father's blood, and the tales in which he had revelled were those of daring exploit and Indian foe during the troubled years between 1740 and 1764. But, as every emigrant to the wild North learned to his cost, a calmer and sturdier courage was required in the harder battle of civilization. Canada was a wild and trackless forest, and the victory to be won there was a victory over unutterable hardships and almost insurmountable obstacles. Enormous forests filled with fierce beasts and pestilent insects had to be cleared. Not a single road invited communication between widely separated hamlets, and the making of one to the French settlements was an era. The accumulated snow and ice of a very long winter left but a short season for agriculture, and when famine threatened it was no unusual thing for the "Associates" to tramp twenty, thirty, even forty miles, each in his turn, carrying a bag of corn to the mill, that he and his neighbors might have bread. When Silas Knowlton took two barrels of potash to Montreal, it required two sleds with two yoke of oxen for each, and a journey of eighteen days, and although the profits were one hundred dollars, invested in household necessities, the money was well earned.

Their meal was prepared in "plumping mills," a rude contrivance of an upright log bored out, and a pestle attached to a spring pole. One quart only could be pounded at a time, and the meal was eaten mixed with pumpkin.

The life of Silas Knowlton and his brave wife is, as yet, an unwritten story of heroic courage and splendid self-sacrifice, out of which have come, long years ago, thrift and happiness to many who have "entered into their labors."

Going to market was the one great event of the year, and this, too, over a road constructed through bogs and swamps, because that was the shorter and the only feasible way. The Knowltons were their own architects and cabinet makers, and their original homes were rude in construction and appointment. Good digestion must have waited on appetite, for they were a healthy and sturdy race, and during the long absences of their husbands and brothers the women reared and defended their children with consummate courage.

These Knowltons were not altogether at an advantage over their fellow settlers, for of the latter all who had remained loyal to the Crown during the Revolutionary struggle, and who had professed fidelity to "the United Empire of Great Britain," were styled the U. E., and to them and to each descendant forever was to be given a grant of two hundred acres of land, free from expense of survey, and of tax. Under this act of Parliament, or royal proclamation, the public lands of the Province are still granted to all who can prove their descent from a U. E. The Knowltons soon became, as they still remain, quite as loyal to the British, as they had been to the American, flag.

Sarah was a woman of uncommon beauty and grace, and one of the most prominent figures in Brattleboro society. Her early home was in Newfane, Vt., where she became so familiar with the privations and simplicity of pioneer life that she was intimidated by no subsequent perils. Indians and wild beasts were the familiar enemies of her childhood, and she became as courageous as she was handsome. She married John Holbrook, a country merchant, who carried his produce and goods for barter on a pack-horse through West River Valley, from Newfane to Greenfield, Mass., returning with other goods gotten by exchange. Their daughter, afterwards Mrs. Fessenden, was the first woman to ride in a wheeled conveyance in that part of the country.

Mr. and Mrs. Holbrook removed to Brattleboro, Vt., and bought the dwelling-house now known as the "American House," a public inn, a portion of which was used for a country store. To secure a proper depot for his produce and a convenient place for exchange, Mr. Holbrook formed a partnership with David Porter, a leading merchant of Hartford, Conn., and the firm thereafter conducted the two stores as branches of the same house. Mr. Holbrook became a director of the old Phoenix Bank, Hartford, and brought the first bank notes ever circulated in Brattleboro.

He also built a large slaughter house, where he cured large quantities of beef, pork, hams, and tongue for the West Indian market, transporting these to the seaboard on a line of flat boats which he had established on the Connecticut River.

In 1809 he sold out all his property and removed to Warehouse Point, Ct. His commanding figure, positive manner, and sonorous voice gave him so powerful an influence over his fellow-men, that it was said that a request or command from him was likely to be obeyed as quickly as if shot from a gun. He was by faith a Congregationalist, and a Deacon of the church, though not a predestinarian. On one occasion, his pastor, having called on him, engaged him in an earnest argument, in which the spiritual guide asserted the truth of infant damnation. The worthy Deacon rose, opened the door, and drove the parson into the street, declaring that any one who held such "damnable" doctrines could not stay under his roof.

Mr. Holbrook was postmaster of Brattleboro, 1794-1804, and the second original member of the Vermont Asylum under the Marsh bequest. He died 1838. Sarah d. March 22, 1851.

LUKE KNOWLTON, JR.,

seventh child of Hon. Luke, was born in Newfane, March 24, 1775., where he resided for more than forty years. He received his education at Westminster, Vt., and Chesterfield, N. H., after which he entered the office of his brother Calvin as a law student. His subsequent career was that of a very successful and eminent lawyer. He married, in 1799, Miss Charlotte Kenney of the same town. An incident connected with this marriage illustrates the character of this extraordinary man. Miss Kenny was little more than a child, being under sixteen years of age. Her father, an active and enterprising man, owned a large estate of one thousand acres, six hundred and fifty of which were under careful cultivation, and he passed for a rich man in those earlier and simpler times. When young Knowlton asked him for his daughter there was a stormy interview. The father formulated his objections in true business style by three propositions: (1) She was too young; (2) he could not spare her; (3) she would have no dower, there being eleven other children to share his property. To these the ardent young advocate promptly replied, (1) that Charlotte would grow older every day, and as rapidly in his hands as in those of her father; (2) that her father had a wife and other daughters, while he (Luke) had none, and that Kenny could therefore do without her better than he could; (3) that he wanted the daughter, and not the dowry. The young lawyer won his case, and it was not long before the objections of the father disappeared, for Luke was soon and for many years a member of the State Legislature, and Assistant Judge of Windham County Court. His ability won the business confidence of

Dr. Seth was a physician, and is still quoted as one of the best in Shrewsbury. He was an original character, and his personal habits are supposed to have contributed to his professional success. Among the remedies used were such singular ingredients as pulverized toads, beetles, and other objectionable matter, not uncommon among the practitioners of the day. The surprising cures with which he is credited are a curious illustration of the influence of the mental on the physical condition, for the faith of his patients in his skill was absolute. He d. EZEKIEL KNOWLTON a foster child of an English naval officer, named Eastman, who died at an early age. Polly was the sister of Joseph Knowlton, who fought in the battle of Bunker and who died July 7, 1845, aged ninety six.

The following letter will show that Ezekiel was eminently practical, and,
I, not wanting in facetiousness.

DAVISTOWN, April 14th, 1795.

DEAR POLLY:--

I embrace the present opportunity to inform you, if in the land of the living, that I, through the infinite goodness of a merciful God, am in good health, and am making shooger, and hope these lines will find you enjoying the same blessing.

I expect to come down before planting, and if you and your babe are able to come up I shall be glad to have you be ready in about three weeks. Its tedious living here alone. It is a great time of scarcity here, and I must go down after seed corn, for there is neither corn or grain to be had here in this place. It will be very difficult getting Bread here, and it is very difficult and costly living alone, and maintaining two families—so I think “of the two evils,” as the saying is, “it is best to choose the least,” and as we shall both enjoy more satisfaction by living together than apart, I think it best to move you up as soon as posable.
I suppose you will be loth to leave your friends, but you may remember what I have often told you—that I am the only friend that you have on earth's world according to the laws of matrimony, and if there is any other that you set more by than you set by me I must look out for another housekeeper, for I cannot live alone. I don't write this to grieve you, my Dear, but because I would wish to be just. I look very plain.

But being in haste I must close by subscribing myself your loving friend and partner till death.

Samuel was the second male child born in the township of Farmington, Me.
He was a millwright by trade, and operated mills at Farmington Falls for several years in company with his father, Johnathan. In 1823 he removed to Phillips, on the Sandy River, where he united the occupation of farming with that of milling. In September, 1831, he started for the west, taking his wife and five children in covered wagons, and arrived after a six-weeks journey at a point thirty miles from Cincinnati, in a wild country. Their only possessions now were four worn-out horses, two wagons, and fifty cents in money. Out of such adverse circumstances Samuel and his brave wife conquered a subsistence, built up a comfortable and thrifty home, and left to their family a respectable estate. The place of their residence is now known as Mainville, Ohio.

... and waiting patiently for his pay. His sterling character and proverbial honesty were such that, in a certain lawsuit in which he was the defendant, the witness for the plaintiff was adjudged by the court to be a perjurer, and the decree and record were ordered to be so entered. When his father was dying of a fever, and had been given up by three physicians, he killed several sheep, wrapped the patient in their pelts, and the father recovered.

Susan Smith, wife of Ezekiel, came from Manchester, Mass., being brought on horseback when very young in her mother's arms. Her father, Samuel, was a soldier of the Revolution, and left his widow with two small children. Susan went out at service when but seven years old, and being compelled to go into the fields barefoot on a frosty morning she took refuge with her grandparents until nineteen years of age, when she married Ezekiel Knowlton, her wedding-dress being of homespun flannel.

MOSES KNOWLTON

was born in New Gloucester, Me., and removed to Essex, Mass., when a boy, where he spent the remainder of his life, on what is known as Hog Island. He was a very successful farmer, and owned one of the four farms into which the island is divided. The Hon. Rufus Choate was born on one of these farms, a lawyer of national celebrity, whose extraordinary career added lustre to the fame of the Old Bay State.

Moses Knowlton removed from Hog Island to the town proper where he continued actively in farming until extreme old age obliged him to retire. His physical strength was phenomenal, and he was often seen to lift a barrel of cider over the tail board of his farm wagon with perfect ease. His mental activity was no less remarkable, and only the lack of early educational advantages prevented him from occupying the prominent public position for which he was by nature eminently fitted.

He was a Director in the Cape Ann National Bank of Gloucester, Mass., and a highly esteemed citizen of Essex.

Though her heart almost ceased to beat from the terror of the situation, she replied instantly, opening her arms at the words :

“Go ahead! I would rather die than lead such a life as I am leading with you!” “You would, hey,” shouted the excited husband. “Well, you can’t have your way this time. You’ve got to live with me.”

1032 Joshua Knowlton,

b. October 21, 1760, is thought by some to have been killed in the Revolutionary War. As a possible refutation of this belief, the following will be interesting to the reader. Many years since, a man of about forty years of age called on Mr. Geo. H. Knowlton, of Lowell, Mass., introducing himself as Carl Knowlton, from Vienna, Austria, claiming to be a son of Joshua, who fought in the Revolutionary War. He presented a letter from his father, in which the writer claimed to be the identical soldier, and said that at the close of the war he had left the country with the German troops, having formed intimate friendships with some of them, and settled in Germany, where he had married a native. He was anxious to have his son visit his relatives in Connecticut, and he was liberally supplied with funds for that purpose. Mr. Geo. H. Knowlton gave him suitable letters for that purpose, from which nothing further was heard. There can be but little doubt that Joshua, not returning to Ashford, was believed to have been killed in the war, and that Carl was his son.

NATHANIEL KNOWLTON

was the son of Lieutenant Daniel, of Ashford, Conn., and a twin brother of Manassah. When he was but fourteen years old, his father came home on a furlough, and in the course of conversation offered his old French musket to that son who would go back with him. Nathaniel promptly volunteered, and remained until the close of the war. He rem. to Greenbush, N. Y., in 1800, and carried on farming there. Although a soldier by nature and by profession, he was the peace-maker of the town in all public and private disputes, and his profound Christian character gave his counsels decisive weight. Between him and his brother Manassah there existed a most tender and poetic attachment.

In his old age Nathaniel used to entertain the young people by shouldering his staff, and marching about his home singing patriotic songs with enthusiasm. He served in the War of 1812, was a pensioner, and d. at Greenbush July 6, 1852. Sarah d. February 7, 1844.

was born in Ashford, Ct., December 24, 1770. His resemblance to his twin brother Nathaniel was so complete that the identity of the two boys could be established only by a dimple in Manassah's cheek, and his own mother was often obliged to excite him to laughter that she might certainly know which of the two he really was. At the age of twenty-one, Manassah settled in Greenbush, N. Y., near the City of Albany, and having learned the blacksmith's trade he opened a shop of his own on the Rensselaer and Columbia Turnpike, the main and post road connecting Albany with N. Y. City and Boston.

The large number of horses used by mail and stage coaches and by travelers of every class—the only means of transit at that time—gave Manassah a flourishing business, and during the War of 1812 it was common enough to see a group of cavalry horses at his shop door at four o'clock in the morning, waiting to be shod by the young Vulcan. In 1798, he purchased a farm of 162 acres, near by, formerly a part of "ye Manor of Rensselaerwyck," of which Stephen Van Rensselaer was the proprietor, and thereafter worked the farm and the shop together. Originally an "Open Communion Baptist" and there being no congregation of this faith at Greenbush, Manassah declined to unite with any church until eight years before his death, when he became a member of the M. E. Church, adorning his profession with "excellency of virtue and innocence of life."

son of Col. Thomas, inherited his father's spirit. When the first rumor of hostilities reached him, he left home secretly, walked hurriedly as far as New London, and turned back only when he had learned the falsity of the rumor. When but fifteen, he swore that he was eighteen years old, in order to be accepted as a Volunteer. Although strictly forbidden to follow his father to Boston, he disobeyed, and when the men "fell in" at the word of command at Bunker Hill, Col. Knowlton detected his son mustering off to the left of the line. The father gave him a poor musket to discourage him from joining the ranks, but finding his resolution inflexible he substituted a good musket for the bad one, and offered no further opposition. He served under his father at Harlem Heights, after which Washington sent him home to assist in the support of his widowed mother.

"Aunt Demia," as Diodemia was familiarly called, d. in Winsted, Conn., August 11, 1884, lacking but a few days of reaching her one hundredth year, preparations for the celebration of which were making at the time of her death. She was the daughter of Stephen Knowlton, a soldier of the Revolution, who came from Chatham, Conn., to Winsted, and emigrated to Ohio in 1804, taking his large family in ox-wagons. On their arrival at Albany, N. Y., they were overtaken by Moses Camp, who had found that he could not live without Diodemia, and the reluctant consent to their marriage was gained from the parents. The young couple settled in Winsted, where they lived until their death. Diodemia was a woman of extraordinary force of character, and her mind and memory had been so enriched by the great national events of which she had been a witness, that she was a most entertaining conversationalist. She wrote poetry when past ninety years of age, and her wit and vivacity were keen until the last. But a few hours before her death she remarked when sitting in the family circle, "I am so old that I think I have forgotten everything." "Better join the Know-Nothings, then," remarked a kinswoman. "I would not have far to go," was the ready retort.

She was a staunch Congregationalist, a pattern mother, and a pure soul.

BENJAMIN KNOWLTON

was b. at Clarendon, Vt. He was educated in part at Brandon (Vt.) Seminary, in which institution he subsequently became a teacher. Removing to Western New York he accepted the position of principal of a public school in Buffalo, retiring from this, after faithful and successful work, to Springville, N. Y. He finally purchased a farm in Elton, N. Y., where he passed the remainder of a happy and useful life. He also studied medicine, and received a license to practice as a botanical physician, but he never made this his actual profession. He was an ardent Methodist, helpful and generous in his support of the work of that denomination, but by no means limited, either in sympathy or practical assistance, to his household of faith. His old saddle-bags are now the valued heirlooms of his son, Dr. Chas. Benjamin.

He d. at Yorkshire Centre, N. Y., March 21, 1876. Cynthia d. June 8, 1890.

Dr. Charles Benjamin Knowlton, (2837) s. of Benj. and Eliza, was born in Buffalo, September 15, 1836. He received his education at the Oberlin (O.) Institute, the Cleveland, Bryan & Stratton Business College, and under Spencer, the author of the "Spencerian Penmanship." Before entering upon the practice of his chosen profession, the law, he was a professor in the department of commercial education, teaching penmanship, book-keeping, and commercial law, in the Buffalo Bryan & Stratton College, and his skilful and graceful penmanship naturally led to the selection of him as the Superintendent of the Department of Penmanship in the public schools of Buffalo.

He subsequently studied both law and medicine, and on graduating with first honors from the Medical Department of the University of Buffalo, his thesis on "Forensic Medicine" was adjudged the best one submitted, and as such it was ordered to be printed.

Dr. Knowlton has been for many years an active and influential friend to the educational interests of his native city. He is a life member of the Buffalo Society of Natural Science, the Buffalo Historical Society, and the Buffalo Library Association. Aside from his practice at the Buffalo Bar, he is much devoted to agricultural interests, and spends most of his summers at "Idleside," a pretty country-seat on his large farm in Elton, his winters being spent at his city residence, "O-neh-gi-yok" on Massachusetts Avenue, Buffalo.

C. Escaped at Goldsboro, February 18th, and arrived in the Union lines at Newbern, N. C., March 1, 1865, making one year in the hands of the enemy. He was discharged from the service at Elmira, N. 1242 CAPTAIN MINER KNOWLTON, U. S. A.

Captain Miner Knowlton was a grandson of Lieut. Daniel Knowlton, a grandnephew of Col. Thomas Knowlton, and first cousin of Gen. Nathaniel Lyon, an officer of the Regular Army of the United States, and instructor at West Point Military Academy. At the last officers' mess he attended, when ending his long and arduous duties at West Point, in 1844, he was stricken with epilepsy. He was always an ambitious student while performing his duties as Instructor in Mathematics, French, Artillery, and Cavalry, and he finally broke down through overstudy.

For this reason he obtained a furlough, and visited many foreign countries in the hope of overcoming the malady, yet always striving to inform himself in military affairs, and giving to the Government the benefit of all information he acquired of foreign armaments and methods. Thus, after leaving West Point, we find him in the French Army in Algeria, and later on in Bermuda, and in Havana, Cuba, on delicate and special service for the Government, and doing recruiting service and engineering work on the Rio Grande, although incapacitated through disease for service in the field, during the Mexican War.

The "falling sickness" never left him, and at the breaking out of the war in 1861, being then 57 years old and the oldest captain in the Artillery, he retired from the service, and spent the remainder of his life at Burlington,

N. J., where he had gone to secure necessary quiet, and where he organized a company of home guards known as the "Knowlton Rifles."

He was the instructor of Lee, Grant, Beauregard, Lyon, and many of the prominent West Point officers, both Union and Confederate, who took part in the Civil War.

An ardent Republican, he was always courteous to those who differed from him in politics.

He was more the student than the fighter, and, adding to the inborn courtesy of the old school the trained etiquette of the Regular Army officer, he had the breadth of view and the charity of a highly educated and liberal-minded man.

Captain Knowlton was never married. He is buried in St. Mary's Churchyard, Burlington, N. J., and his monument is capped with a fac-simile in stone of a mortar ready for discharge and the inscription reads: "Our aim is always heavenward—for God and for our country."

Ashbel Woodward inscribed his "Life of General Lyon" to Captain Knowlton as a tribute "to patriotism, integrity and distinguished attainments, and a memorial of old and uninterrupted friendship."

Captain Knowlton fostered the military instincts of the descendants of Lieut. Daniel Knowlton, and it is believed that his example largely influenced Lyon in adopting a military career, and that, thereafter, Lyon was guided in military and other matters by the precepts and opinions of the relative and friend who, fourteen years his senior, was his instructor and the respected comrade of the older and then more distinguished officers of the Army.

The publication of the "Life of General Lyon" for distribution among his relatives, and for the public libraries, was mainly due to Captain Knowlton, and it is probable that it was at his request that his friend, Ashbel Woodward, edited the pamphlet with miniature engraving of the battle of Bunker Hill, in memory of Col. Thomas Knowlton.

Captain Knowlton built a beautiful home for himself in Burlington, N. J., where he entertained his friends and his old Army comrades, and in spite of a generous expenditure of money and of his many silent charities, such were his habits from the early training in Connecticut that, through good management and intelligent investment of accumulated savings from the modest pay of an Army officer, he left a handsome fortune at his death.

DANFORD KNOWLTON.

was born at Ashford, Windham County, Conn., May 5, 1811. His father and mother were Daniel and Hannah Knowlton, both of the same name, and from families remotely connected. On the paternal side they were farmers in comfortable circumstances, having influence in the community, and filling places of trust and responsibility. On the maternal side they were also farmers, the grandfather of the subject of the present sketch, Daniel Knowlton, and Thomas Knowlton, his brother, being conspicuous while quite young in the war against the French and Indians, serving with General Putnam, and in the early struggles for national independence.

In the autumn of 1832, Mr. Knowlton left a happy paternal home with a desire to find some occupation more congenial to his taste than farming. On April 10, 1833, he entered into an existing firm doing a wholesale grocery business in Hartford, Conn. Continuing the same class of business until December, 1843, he removed to New York, looking for a wider field of operations. With some changes of partners, the wholesale grocery business was continued until 1852, when he visited the island of Cuba and united the importation of its products with the existing enterprise. This mixed class of business was continued until 1861, when the firm confined itself to importation only, from the West Indies and South America. In 1855 Mr. Knowlton retired from business, after fifty-two years of successful mercantile life, in which he earned an enviable reputation for business enterprise and commercial honor.

During the continuance of the importing business, a good deal of controversy arose between importers and refiners of sugar respecting the proper duty to be placed upon various classes of sugar, the latter desiring so to discriminate against the better classes suitable for consumption as to prevent their importation.

These controversies led to various appeals to Congress, in which the importers generally found the champagne and good dinners of the refiners more effective than the solid arguments and cold water of the importers. Thus that "infant industry" was so protected as to lead to colossal fortunes among the refiners of sugar, at the expense of the consumers, resulting in the exclusion from the country of all sugars except such as are required for refining. In these controversies Mr. Knowlton took a prominent part, appearing before committees of Congress and contributing many articles on the subject to the press, and otherwise securing the attention of the members of Congress.

Danford Knowlton was first cousin and life-long friend of Gen'l Lyon, and on the receipt of the news of the hero's death at Wilson's Creek, he started from New York at once to secure the body. At St. Louis he secured a metallic coffin, and after much delay there, caused by General Fremont, he succeeded in obtaining permission for an ambulance and an escort to pass under flag of truce inside the rebel lines to Springfield, Mo. At Rolla he met our army, August 20, 1861, and from Emmett MacDonald, Captain Com'd'g C. S. A., who was there to exchange prisoners, he obtained permit to pass inside the rebel lines. After a rough ride to Springfield he found the body there tenderly cared for by Mrs. Phelps, a loyal Connecticut woman. It had been left on the field of battle; then recovered by our retreating army under flag of truce, and again left at Springfield in the hurried retreat from that place. Danford Knowlton brought the body to Eastford, Conn., where it was buried.

In his matrimonial experience, Mr. Knowlton was one of the most fortunate of men. Married to Miss Miranda H. Rockwell, the daughter of Park and Esther Rockwell of Stafford, Conn., September 26, 1837, he passed almost forty-nine years of a most happy union with one whose amiable character rendered her beloved by all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance. Previous to retirement from business, Mr. Knowlton built a fine country residence in Stafford, at the birthplace of his wife, with a view of spending at least his summers in that delightful locality. He died there in December, 1890, and was buried in the family lot in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn, Long Island, N. Y.

Edwin Knowlton was born in Ashford, Conn., June 24, 1835. His education was limited to that of the public schools, and though desirous of a wider business sphere, his filial duty kept him on the farm of his parents, which he brought to a high state of cultivation, and greatly extended its area. It has been in the possession of the Knowltons for a century and a half, being now owned and worked by Robert, the eldest son. Edwin's industry and enterprise made him prominent among his townsmen, and he was at various times Selectman, Highway Surveyor, and Representative. His good judgment and sterling integrity made him in constant request for the settlement of estates, and when the old Baptist Society decided to distribute an accumulated fund among the members and heirs of deceased members, he was selected to make the distribution.

Jabez Knowlton was born in Ashford, Conn., where he worked on his father's farm during the summer, attending the public school during the winter months. This limited education was about all that the average New England boy received at that time, but it proved to be serviceable and effectual when supplemented by native shrewdness and personal industry. At the age of twenty-two Jabez removed to Maine, where he conducted a thrifty business in books and clocks. When in Newburgh, he always stopped at the Bickford Tavern, a notable hostelry on the turnpike between Bangor and Augusta, where he met Susan, the landord's daughter, whom he soon after made his happy wife. He went into the business of a "General Store" then owned by his father-in-law, and when this was burned he erected one of his own, where he continued business for the rest of his active life, accumulating a handsome fortune. His suavity of manner, generosity to debtors, and geniality to everyone made him a great favorite. He was a prominent member of the old Whig party, and, though living in a Democratic district, was sent to the State Legislature in 1849. After the dissolution of his party, he became a Democrat, but his popularity so far prevailed over partisanship that both parties joined in making him Postmaster and Selectman for forty years, and Town Treasurer for thirty-seven years. He died at Newburgh, June 3, 1895, beloved and regretted by all.

HON. PAUL HOLLAND KNOWLTON,
Knowlton, P. Q.

1465 Paul Holland and Laura Moss having no children, they adopted several of the children of Luke, son of Silas.

HON. PAUL HOLLAND KNOWLTON.

Paul Holland, son of Silas and Sarah was born in Newfane, Vt., and was, therefore, but a lad when his parents invaded the wilderness. He was old enough, however, to remember that he was left with his mother in a temporary log cabin on the way while his father and Capt. John Whitney went off to hunt game for supper, and to procure fodder for their oxen; the women keeping off the wild beasts by lighting fires around the cabin, and hanging blankets before the door and windows. Young Paul was sent back to Newfane three years later to be educated, and while attending the academy he boarded with his grandfather Luke, and his uncle, Luke, Jr. From these two kinsmen and rare men he daily drew an inspiration that determined his future career. He returned to Stukely in 1807, and when but twenty years old married Miss Laura Moss, a school teacher of Bridport, Vt. After spending six years in farming, he purchased another large farm in Brown Township in 1834, and also engaged in mercantile pursuits on an extensive and varied scale. He built mills, stores, and a church, and threw himself with characteristic energy into every possible effort to promote the public and private interests of the infant community.

The permanent result of his creative genius and public spirit is seen to-day in the town of Knowlton, named from its founder, charmingly situated at the head of Brome Lake, and a centre of business, social, and religious activity. It was inevitable that the first permanent settler in, and founder of, Knowlton should become a prominent factor in the larger problem and sphere of provincial development, and this he became, giving his services for the most part without fee or reward. He was a prominent member of the Historical and Literary Society of the Province of Quebec; a member of the Provincial Parliament in 1827, and he served as a member of the Special Council for Lower Canada, and also of the Legislative Council for thirty-five years, until his death in 1863. He was commissioned Lieut.-Colonel of Militia in 1837, and by his personal force and military skill the Canadian troops subdued the Papineau rebellion incited by religious fanaticism. For this public service he received the thanks of Parliament, and his reputation passed over to the mother country. Henceforth his life was tinged with something of romance. The honorable mention in the English papers attracted the attention of Miss Knowlton of Darley Dale, and led first to a correspondence, and then to an invitation to visit her. The invitation was accepted, an intimate friendship resulted, and in April, 1845, he opened an English letter to learn that the celebrated Devonshire beauty had died, leaving him heir to her entire and handsome fortune.

Hon. Paul Knowlton and Laura, his wife, having no children, adopted three of his brother Luke's children.

HON. FREDERICK HOLBROOK

is historically known as the distinguished "War Governor" of Vermont. He was the great-great-grandson of Thomas Knowlton, who married for his first wife Margery, daughter of Joseph Goodhue, and four generations later the Knowlton and Goodhue bloods again unite in Frederick Holbrook and his wife, the daughter of Col. Joseph Goodhue. Mr. Holbrook was b. in 1813, in Brattleboro, Vt., where his parents had settled in 1795. Natural genius had been assisted by a good education when young Holbrook began the work of practical life. At eighteen years of age, he was captain of a company of State Militia. Before he was of age he had learned a good deal of business matters and methods in the book store of Richardson, Lord, & Holbrook, Boston, but preferring agricultural life he returned to Brattleboro, and for many years was a practical farmer. He began his political career in 1847 as Register of Probate, and in 1849 and '50 was a State Senator. Chiefly by his efforts a joint committee was appointed at this time to consider the expediency of forming a National Bureau of Agriculture, and as Chairman of such committee he prepared a memorial to Congress which found prompt support in a recommendation in President Taylor's Message to Congress, that the proposed Bureau be organized. The recommendation was adopted, and the Bureau became a fact. From 1850-1861, Senator Holbrook was President of the State Agricultural Society, a member of the Board of Trustees of the Brattleboro Retreat, and President of the Vermont Savings Bank.

At the outbreak of the Rebellion, Senator Holbrook was nominated for Governor in a notable convention of men of all political creeds, who forgot party interests in the greater question of the preservation of the Union, and in September, 1861, he was elected by an overwhelming majority. He proposed and carried through a financial measure which enabled the State to equip and send into the field a larger number of troops, it is said, than any other State, in proportion to its population.

When President Lincoln was almost bewildered by conflicting opinions of politicians, he turned, in his anxious search for a clear and judicious estimate of duty, to Governor Holbrook, and the letter written by the latter being laid before Gen. Simeon Draper, Provost Marshal-General, and the Secretary of War, on a Tuesday night, solved the President's difficulties, and resulted in the call for 300,000 volunteers. To Governor Holbrook's courage and faith is due, in large part, the splendid record of the State in the war for the Union. In the face of opposition and honest doubts, he pushed through his own plan for a military hospital in Vermont, and the surprising cures wrought on the sick and wounded in the hospital at Brattleboro, and the conservation of the splendid material in the Green Mountain soldiers, placed the State far ahead of all other States in her successful treatment of sick and disabled soldiers.

The term of Governor Holbrook's official service was a most memorable one. And in private life he is an illustration of the symmetrical statesman, the zealous patriot, the modest gentleman, and the genial friend.

LINCOLN B. KNOWLTON

was b. in Shrewsbury, Mass. He graduated from Union College, under the presidency of Dr. Nott, studied law in the office of Governor Davis of Massachusetts, and opened a law office in Peoria, Ill. He was an intimate friend of Abraham Lincoln, David Davis, Stephen A. Douglas, and other noted men of his time. His natural eloquence as a speaker, and his vigorous presentation of his legal cases, were made all the more forceful by his striking personality.

Over six feet in height, and remarkably well proportioned, he towered above his fellows physically as well as mentally, and he easily won the name of "the Henry Clay of the Illinois Bar." He was a delegate to the Baltimore Convention in the interest of Henry Clay, and was nominated for Congress, but died before the election. Being asked to name his successor in the canvass, he named his friend James Knox, who was elected. In the history and traditions of the Illinois Bar, Lincoln B. Knowlton will always hold a prominent place, and it was not an extravagant estimate of his extraordinary abilities and sterling character that made his friends predict for him an illustrious national career. His sense of justice called him promptly to the side of an injured or oppressed defendant, often without fee or reward, and his only weakness seems to have been a too implicit confidence in the honesty of others, a confidence which involved him in large financial losses. He married in 1834 Charlotte Spooner, and after her death Lucretia Wolcott, a lineal descendant on the maternal side of Governor William Bradford and Alice Southworth, his wife, of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay, and, on the paternal side, of the Plymptons and Peabodys of England, and Governors Rogers and Oliver Wolcott, prominent in the settlement of the Colony of Connecticut, and Signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Mrs. Knowlton survives her husband in a green and genial old age that is a benediction to all the members of a large social and domestic circle.

Samuel resided on the home farm which he purchased from his father in 1834, to which he subsequently added other valuable property, becoming a prosperous and representative farmer. He was of striking physique, being over six feet tall, weighing two hundred and thirty pounds, and his many physical feats were the foundation of many interesting anecdotes still current in his native town. His farm was noted for the size of its huge stone fences, which he called "Jackson Walls" out of admiration for the hero of New Orleans. His wife Martha was a noble woman, taking unusual and intelligent interest in public affairs, ruling also her household well, and her death which occurred July 10, 1881, was the occasion of a general demonstration of regretful regard. MARK D. KNOWLTON was b. in Milford, N. H., October 5, 1840. He received the education common to the average New England lad, and at the age of seventeen went to Nashua to learn the trade of a carriage maker. In 1861 he went to Camden, N. Y., to assist his brother in the management of his farm, and in the following year entered the service of Rice, Barton & Co., Paper Machinery Manufacturers, Worcester, Mass.

In 1863 he was in charge of a prosperous business in the manufacture of carriage hardware, in Nashua, N. H., from which he withdrew to become the owner of a paper box manufactory a year later. In 1867 his interest in the extraordinary business development and future promise of the great West induced him to remove to Chicago, where he was the first to apply modern methods and mechanical improvements in his growing business. The prosperity which at once rewarded his foresight and enterprise was rudely interrupted by the great Chicago fire, which left of his flourishing business only a heap of ashes. Having located his residence at the neighboring suburb of Evanston, he promptly assisted in organizing a relief association and mounted patrol for the assistance of refugees and the protection of the homes and property of his fellow-citizens, filling his own house with the unfortunate and the destitute, his family, with equal benevolence, cooking the necessary food for the famishing, and clothing the almost naked victims of that tragic horror. Mr. Knowlton was the first to re-establish his business while the city was still burning.

In 1873 the second fire swept away every vestige of his manufactory, but with characteristic energy he again rebuilt, and in 1878 was as prosperous as ever, employing over four hundred operatives, and producing a daily average of over four tons of boxes. His early mechanical experience was so assisted by his inventive genius that in 1890 he was furnishing both new machinery and finished products throughout the country.

As most of the manufacturers in his line were East of the Alleghanies, he concluded to confine himself to the manufacture of machinery, and the business was divided, he removing to Rochester, N. Y., and his partner continuing to manufacture goods in Chicago.

Since March, 1891, Mr. Knowlton has resided in Rochester, where he now continues his business, protected by many U. S. Patents which he has secured by his own inventive genius, and which have given him an enviable footing in the great American and European markets.

He served for two years as Justice of the Peace in Evanston, Ill., declining re-election, and has devoted himself to business and philanthropic interests since that time. An ardent Republican in politics and a devout and loyal Presbyterian in religious faith, he serves his country with conscientious citizenship, and his fellow-men with modest benevolence that commend him to the love and regard of all.

His only son, Kirk K., is in Purdue University, La Fayette, Ind., of the class of 1900, taking a full course in electrical engineering. His grade of scholarship in previous years gives full assurance of distinction in his chosen profession.

JAMES A. KNOWLTON

was born in Gloucester, Mass., in 1821. When but a small boy he removed to Salem, where he was apprenticed to a ship-builder, and before many years he had founded a business of his own, in which he was eminently successful. In 1844 he removed from Salem to Gloucester, becoming the proprietor of a ship-yard from which craft of all sorts have been launched. He inevitably became one of the most widely known and respected of the citizens of his native town, taking great interest in local and political matters, and serving as overseer of the poor, assessor, selectman, and, in fact, in nearly every office in the gift of his fellow-citizens. For about forty years he spent his winters at Norfolk, Va.

enlisted in the United States Army, and served in the Florida War. His regicould no longer be had, and the troops being on the verge of starvation, the commanding officer called for volunteers in a "forlorn hope," and who would risk their lives in an attempt to reach the next garrison and obtain relief. Samuel Knowlton was the only volunteer. He threaded the dense forest by night, hiding and sleeping by day; and for several days he eluded the vigilance of the enemy. He finally lost his way, was captured by the savages, and flayed alive.

JULIA KNOWLTON DYER

was b. in Deerfield, N. H., August 25, 1829. She is a lineal descendant of Gen. Dearborn, of Bunker Hill fame, and of Col. Thomas Knowlton of Maine.

Her infancy was spent in Concord, N. H., and in 1839 she was taken to Manchester, and educated under private teachers, and in boarding school. At the age of 18, she was graduated from New Hampton Institute, with first honors, and became a teacher of French, English Literature, and Higher Mathematics.

On her marriage to Micah Dyer, Esq., a lawyer of high standing, she removed to Dorchester, on the old and attractive Clapp estate, where she still resides. Her career has been so marked that few women in Massachusetts society are better, or more honorably, known than she. In 1864, the Dedham Home for Discharged Soldiers was founded through her personal efforts, and she has for thirty years made monthly visits to the Institution.

In 1882, she was chosen President of the Ladies' Aid Association. She founded the Women's Charity Club for the benefit of females needing surgical treatment, starting the enterprise with faith and courage, though without one dollar of capital, and made it a permanent success and blessing.

She organized the Wintergreen Club for women over fifty years of age, became its President, and has been the V. Pres. of the W. T. U., and an active member and officer in not less than twenty-five different charitable, philanthropic, and patriotic societies. Her extraordinary ability as an organizer, a speaker, and an administrator has made her an indispensable factor in the working out of many problems of modern society.

Eliza was left an orphan at an early age, and the sober discipline of bereavement soon developed a maturity of thought and action far beyond her years. She was a woman of extraordinary mental gifts and executive ability, and her sterling virtues are the valued legacy of her descendants to the present day. Daniel Coburn was a teacher at the time of their marriage in Hopkinton, but he removed to Charlestown, where he became a prominent lawyer, Chief of Police, a City Alderman, and the High Sheriff of the County. He died at Malden, Mass., January 11, 1865. She died there June 2, 1885.

was born in Boston, where he resided during the early portion of his life. Even in the formative period of his life he gave evidence of those sterling qualities which eventually and rapidly elevated him to high positions in the confidence and suffrages of his fellow-citizens. His impressionable temperament and character were evidenced by his instinctive reverence for good men, especially for the Rev. Dr. Lowell, of the West Church, Boston, and for that great system of moral teaching known as practical Christianity. When quite young he removed to Hopkinton, where he lived with the family of Mr. John Holmes. After the untimely death of his two older brothers by drowning in Echo Lake, he was apprenticed to one James Bowker, farmer and cooper. It serves to mark the simplicity of these times that young William used to go to the woods with his axe, cut and shape the staves by hand, and carry them to the shop for hoop-ing. This out-of-door life, with its vigorous exercise, soon developed the youth into a man of sturdy physique, and at twenty years of age he had saved enough to buy off his remaining year of service. His next venture was at Adams Corner, where he remained one year bottoming shoes, but the confinement and hard work proved unfavorable to his health, and he removed to Upton in 1832; entering the service of one Lyman Stoddard, who kept a country store, a portion of whose business was the buying and selling of hand made straw braid for men's and women's hats. This part of the business called him away in all directions, and the intimate acquaintance with the business itself, and with its operatives, made his services so indispensable to his employer, that he was soon taken in as a partner. Larger accommodations were soon needed, and young Knowlton utilized the skill acquired in coopering by hewing timber for a new store. The modest sign of Stoddard & Knowlton told the people of that section of the country in 1833 that the slender youth had grown up into the full measure of a strong physical and business man.

The firm soon enlarged the business by the making of straw bonnets from domestic braids. After his marriage, William began housekeeping over his store. The firm was dissolved in 1836, and Knowlton formed a new partnership with William Legg, and, subsequently with Joseph Farnum, of Worcester. The intuitive genius of Knowlton had too wide a world and too adventurous a spirit to suit his partners, and he soon saw the wisdom of giving his energy and ability freer scope by building up a business of his own.

He soon impressed himself not only on the history and destiny of his own country town, but on the county and State as well. As an ardent Republican he kept himself in touch with the aggressive politics of the day, and from 1868-72, he represented Upton in the State Legislature.

HON. WILLIAM KNOWLTON,
West Upton, Mass., 1809-1886.

In 1878 he was sent to the State Senate, and he held the positions of Patron and of Trustee of the Massachusetts Agricultural College. His liberal contributions to the Worcester Co. Free Institute of Industrial Science, and to the Free Library of Upton, gave a permanent impetus to their educational work. He was a charter member of the First National Bank of Milford, a Director, and the last surviving member of the original Board.

In the financial panic of 1857, Mr. Knowlton suffered severely, and the breaking out of the War of the Rebellion closed a profitable market for his goods. His rare sagacity had built up an excellent business, and his straw goods were acknowledged to be the best productions of American capital and labor. From simple beginnings and from domestic braids the business had reached out to foreign countries, and England, France, Switzerland, Germany and Italy, China, and Japan, were gleaned for the best braids that foreign labor could produce. The Rebellion closed the Southern market, and made the collection of bills a simple impossibility. Mr. Knowlton declined to compromise with his creditors, insisting on paying every dollar of his obligations. This resolute honesty exalted him still higher in general estimation, and virtue brought its own reward in the returning prosperity of the firm now known as Knowlton & Sons.

Mr. Knowlton's character was a remarkable union of keen insight, prompt judgment and patriotic spirit, unaffected generosity and self-modesty.

He died July 18, 1886, and a superb monument in the Knowlton cemetery reminds the passer-by of him to whom the town of West Upton owes its present place in Massachusetts history. His lasting monument, however, his many monuments in fact, are not among the dead, but among the living. As one strolls through these charming rural scenes, he is reminded of the sententious utterances of the philosophic old Roman, "Si monumentum ejus quæris, circumspice"; if you seek his monument, look about you.

A village, whose pretty white houses and shade trees, and general aspect of tidiness and thrift attract the eye, lies in the slopes of a fine rolling country, equipped with all the belongings of a comfortable and thrifty community. These houses are owned by Knowlton & Sons, and are occupied by their operatives, who are much above the usual standard of factory people. During the productive season, nearly one thousand of these people work in the factories here, and they would not be recognized on the street as persons engaged in manual labor. The factory buildings are large and handsome, heated by steam, and lighted by electricity, and the goods here produced have given the firm an enviable reputation throughout the country.

Knowlton Hall is a handsome and costly building, in which an Opera House is available for public entertainments, a portion of the block being occupied by a fine hotel. A Union and non-sectarian church has also been built by this public-spirited family, and neither money nor pains have been spared in making West Upton a happy and model community.

Wherever one goes he sees the touch of William Knowlton's hand. The aged loved him, little children revered him, the poor blessed him, the State honored him, and when he passed on to his reward a great company of sorrowing hearts bewailed him.

graduated from the Albany Medical College in 1836, and after a valuable period of further study in the office of Dr. Samuel McClellan, an eminent physician of Nassau, he opened an office in Troy, N. Y. After ten years of successful practice he removed to Albany, where for twenty-five years longer he elevated the dignity of his profession by his attractive personality, and by his signal success in his chosen field of family practice. He subsequently removed to Rochester, N. Y., where his career was marked by the same skill, benevolence, and philanthropy that gained him so many friends in Troy and Albany, and he died regretted by a great circle of devoted friends. His widow was a native of Danby, Rutland Co., Vt., and now resides in Rochester with her s. Hamlin.

and oil merchants. His cousin Hosea subsequently became his co-partner, and the firm had the contract for lighting the city of Albany before the days of gas-light. The Knowltons were the first to manufacture and to use as an illuminator the old "burning fluid," and its introduction was accomplished by a novel and shrewd expedient. The cousins hired a large store, filled it with lamps placed together as closely as possible, and at night when they were all lighted the shutters were suddenly taken down, throwing a broad gleam of light into the adjacent street. The cry of "Fire," was at once raised, bells rang out the alarm, and the fire laddies dashed down the streets with their rattling "machines," and through a great crowd of excited citizens, to be confronted only by a clever Knowlton invention. It is needless to add that the new light was generally and promptly adopted. In 1841 George W. sold out his interest in the business, retired to the ancestral farm and homestead, in Greenbush, resided in Nassau and Castleton later on, and finally returned to Albany where he died, Oct. 11, 1884. He was actively identified with local religious enterprises, and at the time of his death was a member of the State St. Presbyterian Church.

Sybil Ann Rowe, b. Nov. 15, 1812, was a descendant of the Rhenish German Rowes, (Rauh), a member of which family, Johannes Rauh, with other citizens of the Palatinate, emigrated from Oppenheim about 1705, and settled in the Nine Partners Tract, Dutchess Co., N. Y., now called Amenia. The line of descent is

- (1) Johannes and Catherine,
- (2) Nicholas and Susannah Winegar,
- (3) Garrett and Mary Paterson,
- (4) Leonard and Susan Freeman.

Susan Freeman was the daughter of Sergeant John Freeman, and granddaughter of Major Robert Freeman of the N. Y. Line in the Revolutionary War; great-granddaughter of Captain Constant Freeman whose wife, Jane Treat of Connecticut, was grand-daughter of Governor Robert Treat, sixth in lineal descent from Deacon Samuel Freeman and Mercy Southworth, daughter of General Constant Southworth of King Philip's War fame. Major Robert Freeman above was a son of Mr. Robert Freeman and Mary Paine, and was sixth in lineal descent from Governor Prince of Massachusetts, and eighth in lineal descent from Stephen Hopkins of the "Mayflower." The mother of General Constant Southworth married Governor William Bradford, and Constant Southworth himself was 3d. in descent from Sir John Southworth, Knight, High Sheriff of Lancaster, who traced his lineage back to Gilbert de Southworth. The Southworth arms and pedigree are registered in the Herald's College, London. The Rauh arms registered in the German Heraldic Records are: Gules, Sinister Band, argent, Crest—a Castle triple-towered.

Sybil Ann Rowe Knowlton died in Albany, N. Y., Aug. 20, 1897, and at the residence of her daughter, Mary Louisa Knowlton Griffith, where for many years during her widowhood, she had made her happy home. She was emphatically a gentlewoman, both in descent and in manner, characterized by an innate refinement that was reflected in gentleness of feature and of speech. Throughout her long and distressing illness her courage and patience gave fresh definition to Christian faith.

GEORGE WASHINGTON KNOWLTON,
Albany, N. Y., 1804-1884.

EPHRAIM KNOWLTON

was emphatically the pioneer of Mill Creek Valley, and of the whole region round about Cincinnati. He removed from Conn. in 1822, and built a house and store at the junction of the old St. Clair and Wayne roads, afterwards known far and wide as Knowlton's Corner. He hewed down forests with his own hand, helped dig a canal, stimulated enterprise and made the first subdivision of the city, calling it Cumminsville, after the original owner of the tract. He became the first Postmaster, erected the old Mill Creek House, in which the polls were held at the time of General Harrison's election, and shingled so many houses that the surface of their roofs measured fully ten acres. He lived to be eighty-eight years old, enjoying in the evening of his life the ample fortune which his industry and enterprise had secured him. He d. February 1, 1888. Mary Ann d. January 6, 1873.

2680 MAJOR-GEN. NATHANIEL LYON,

the seventh child of Amasa and Keziah Knowlton Lyon, was born July 14, 1818, at Ashford, Conn. His paternal grandfather, Ephraim Lyon, had served in the War of Independence, and had afterwards made an excellent reputation as a shrewd and able lawyer, and his maternal grandfather was Lieut. Daniel Knowlton, the famous Scout in the French and Indian War, and also one of the bravest soldiers in the Revolutionary battles. With the blood of two such men pulsing in his veins, it is not surprising that at an early age young Lyon determined to enter West Point Academy, and to give his life to his country. His natural bent of mind was strengthened by fireside stories of patriotic adventure, and the lad's studies were all shaped by the absorbing ambition to become a soldier. He became a Cadet at the Academy in 1837, and letters written by him during the following four years show him to have had exceptional mental ability, remarkable analytical powers, and a consummate scholarship. He graduated the eleventh in rank in a class which numbered on entering over one hundred, and at graduation fifty-two. He was commissioned 2d Lieut. July 1, 1844, and in the following November left home to join the 2d Regiment of Infantry, then ordered to the seat of the Seminole War in Florida. A few hundred savages had been terrorizing for years that section of the country, and successfully defying the efforts of United States troops to expel and punish them. Roused to fury by the wrongs they had suffered from the whites, they had been goaded on to a still deadlier hatred by designing demagogues, and treacherous negroes. Lieutenant Lyon found himself suddenly precipitated from the congenial society and theoretical soldiership of West Point to a trackless wilderness full of malarial poison and skulking savages, to whom a fair field and brilliant soldiership were impossibilities, and the only glory to be won was that of a courageous perseverance in duty. As the story of that memorable Indian War is outside the purpose of this history, it must suffice to say that Lieutenant Lyon was foremost among the brave men, who, for six weary, though exciting, months, hewed and fought their way to eventual success. Insidious disease and extraordinary hardships made great havoc in Lyon's regiment, but while one hundred and thirty officers and privates had died in the Florida Swamps, Lyon emerged in perfect health.

He was now stationed at Sackett's Harbor, on Lake Ontario, where he remained four years, his leisure time being devoted to accurate and varied study. In the summer of 1846 the Mexican War called him to active service again. He assisted in the capture of Vera Cruz, and his company executed some brilliant and effective movements by which the great fortress of Cerro Gordo was reduced. At Jalapa, Cherubusco, the City of Mexico, and other strongholds of the enemy, Lyon acted the part of a brave soldier.

At the close of the war, and as soon as he had set his foot on American soil again, his regiment was ordered to California, where he had a vital relation to the destiny of that charming region, fighting Indians, banishing outlaws, and saving it to civilization and prosperity. When the troubles of "bleeding Kansas" were to be settled by the strong arm of military force, Lyon, now promoted to a Captaincy, was ordered to Fort Riley where he displayed the sagacity, coolness, and decision that had characterized his previous career. He had seen, with clear prophetic vision, the oncoming of that inevitable conflict between freedom and slavery which culminated at the first election of Abraham Lincoln to the presidency, and he bared his arm for that conflict with heroic resolution. The record of his service in Missouri forms one of the grandest and most thrilling recitals of the War of the Rebellion. Traitors under cover of loyal citizenship tried to trap him with their sophistries, but he was more than a match for all of them, and when the dignity of the general government had been compromised in a virtual surrender to the demands of the secessionists by the General in command of the department, Captain Lyon was placed in command with the rank of Brigadier General. To him above all men is due the praise of saving Missouri to the Union. Intrepid as a Spartan, he met rebels with laconic speech and hard, swift blows.

In Smead's "The Fight For Missouri," written by a political opponent and enemy of Lyon, a high tribute to the General's patriotism and courage is cordially paid.

Smead was aide-de-camp to the secessionist Governor Jackson, of Missouri, and subsequently Adjt.-General of the State troops. Under the guise of an armed neutrality and professed prayers for peace, the Governor was making every effort to hand the State over to the Confederates. Lyon had obtained the command of the Department in spite of the political intrigues of ambitious competitors, and he had thrown up fortifications around St. Louis strong and numerous enough to dictate terms to that great commercial centre and, through it, to the State. A final effort was to be made to avert the horrors of war, and

NOTE.

Capt. MacDonald, C. S. A., was at Kolla, Mo., under flag of truce, to exchange prisoners. Danford Knowlton, of New York, cousin and life-long friend of Lyon, wrote the pass and found the body at Springfield, Mo., within the rebel lines, tenderly cared for by Mrs. Phelps, a loyal Connecticut woman. Mr. Knowlton brought the body to Eastford, Conn., where it is buried.

a conference was arranged at the Planter's Hotel, St. Louis, between Union and rebel officers. General Lyon accompanied by Blair and Major Conant, his aide-de-camp, met Governor Jackson, General Price and Colonel Smead, according to appointment, and after a protracted and fruitless discussion of the momentous issues between the State and the Federal Governments, Lyon terminated it by rising and declaring that sooner than permit the State to dictate to his government in any matter, however unimportant, he would see every man, woman and child, in the State dead and buried. With this, he strode out of the room, spurs and sabre clanking, taking out his watch as he went, and said :

“Gentlemen, it is now twelve o'clock. One hour will be given you for dinner. At one o'clock a carriage will be in readiness to escort you out of my lines, and time will be given you to go. If, after that time, you are found within my military jurisdiction, I shall consider you prisoners of war.” Says Smead, “we all looked to see who this red-headed captain was.”

Lyon captured the state militia, drove the rebel governor from the capital, scattered his troops, held Price and McCullough at bay, gave Union men courage and opportunity, and saved Missouri from desperate men and reckless counsels, and so to the Union forever. After much fighting in various portions of his military department, and in which he had met with great success, he was finally confronted with an army twenty-three thousand strong, the very flower of Southern soldiery, concentrated near Springfield, Mo., to wrench the State from the hands of the United States Government. General Lyon had pleaded in vain for reinforcements, and when the shock of battle came at Wilson's Creek, August 9, 1861, Lyon had but a little army of four thousand men with which to meet the disciplined and determined Southern legions. In spite of some Unionist blunders, and of the unparalleled treachery of the Confederates in displaying the Union flag to conceal their real character, the latter were repulsed again and again, and swept from the field in confusion and defeat. But the victory was dearly bought, for Lyon fell mortally wounded. Never since Thermopylae has there been displayed a more splendid Spartan valor than this modern Leonidas exhibited in this battle, one of the greatest in the annals of the great Rebellion.

His body was buried by a noble and loyal woman, Mrs. Phelps, on her own private property, from which it was removed a few days after, and conveyed under military escort to his native town, Eastford, Conn., where the final interment took place with civic and military honors. Special commemorative exercises were held in the National Congress ; Governor Buckingham of Connecticut made the death of the brave Lyon the subject of a special message, and throughout the entire Union words of eloquent and sorrowful eulogy, from pulpit, press, and private home, testified to the nation's bereavement.

HON. MARCUS P. KNOWLTON

was born in Wilbraham, Mass., February 3, 1839. When he was five years old his parents removed to Monson, Mass., where for twelve years he lived on a farm, studying at the public schools and in Monson Academy. After teaching a district school for two winters, he entered Yale College in 1856, graduating in 1860, when he accepted the position of Principal of the Union School, Norwalk, Conn. A year later he entered the law office of James G. Allen, in Palmer, Mass., and afterwards studied under Messrs John Wells and Augustus L. Soule, of Springfield, then law partners, and subsequently Justices of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts. After his admission to the Bar, Marcus opened a law office in Springfield, where he now resides.

In 1870 he was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of the United States, and, although a conscientious devotion to the duties of a large and successful practice has laid an unceasing tax on his time and professional abilities, he has found opportunity to serve the public in various official capacities. In 1872 and '73 he was President of the Common Council of Springfield, and in 1881 a Director of the Springfield & New London Railroad Company, and Trustee and Treasurer of the Springfield City Hospital. In 1878 he represented his adopted city in the State Legislature, where he served on the Committees on Judiciary, Liquor Law, State Detection Force, and Constitutional Amendments, gaining for himself an enviable reputation as one of the leading members. Declining a re-nomination to the House of Representatives, he was sent to the States Senate in 1880, where his independence, integrity and ability won the highest esteem, and secured for him a second term. In 1881 he was appointed a Justice of the Superior Court, and in 1887 was promoted to the bench of the Supreme Judicial Court. His name is associated with many great trials in which the general public have had an absorbing interest, and in which also he has displayed eminent judicial ability.

3017 Mary Knowlton and Achille Extein had no children.

They reside in Springfield, Mass.

DANFORTH HENRY KNOWLTON

was born in New York City. He was graduated at an early age from the College of the City of New York, and was at once associated in business with his father, Danford Knowlton, a prominent sugar merchant and importer in Front St., New York City. He subsequently became a partner in the firm of Parker, Knowlton & Co., coal merchants, and, later on, the senior partner of the Stock Exchange House of Knowlton & Co. Handsome in personal appearance, and genial in manner and temperament, he became a prominent figure in society, and a general favorite. He was the first president of the New York Athletic Club, a member of the Alpha Delta Phi, University, Yacht, and Riding clubs, and a veteran of the famous Seventh Regiment.

He married Miss Mary B., daughter of Edward R. Johnes, Esq., of Newburg, N. Y., who survives him. He died of quick consumption at Lakewood, N. J., where he had gone for the benefit of his health, and was interred in Greenwood Cemetery.

As a recognition of his generous financial aid and unceasing devotion to the interests of the New York Athletic Club, its board of governors presented his family with a touching and loving memorial, of which the following are the concluding words :

"This Club has lost a firm and Sincere friend, who helped it with unexampled generosity ; whose services were always cheerfully rendered, and whose time, energy, and money were untiringly expended in directing the high aim which he was pre-eminent in establishing as the object of its ambition.

SO GENIAL A FRIEND, SO CULTIVATED A GENTLEMAN, AND SO VALUED AN OFFICER,

we believe that we can scarcely look upon his like again."

MINER ROCKWELL KNOWLTON

is the son of Danford Knowlton and Miranda Rockwell, great grandson of Lieut. Daniel Knowlton, great grand nephew of Col. Thomas Knowlton, second cousin of Genl. Nathaniel Lyon, and nephew of Captain Miner Knowlton, U. S. A., after whom he was named. Born June 6th, 1847, in Twelfth street, in the old Ninth Ward of New York City, his early schooling was at Ward school No. 35, known as the Thirteenth Street School, and was continued by two years' training at Churchill's Military Academy at Sing Sing, N. Y.

In 1863, he entered the preparatory class at the Free Academy, now known as "The College of the City of New York." While a student there he joined the Greek letter fraternity of Alpha Delta Phi.

Owing to the ill health of his father in 1867, Miner left college after passing the middle term Junior examinations, and began an active commercial life in New York City, aiding his father in the growing business of the importation of sugar from Cuba, and making frequent trips to that Island. In 1868, he was admitted into full partnership in the house of Danford Knowlton & Co., afterward Knowlton & Co., and for eighteen years continued in that business. Owing to the increased hazard of advancing money to planters, and the impossibility of doing a profitable business with, or of competing against, the tariff which created and protected a Sugar Monopoly, he relinquished the sugar importing business, and after a year spent in new ventures in Nebraska he retired from active business on a moderate competence, devoting his time to the training and education of his children, whose immediate care devolved entirely upon him at this time.

In 1879, the Secretary of the Treasury made an unwarranted ruling, whereby duties not known to the tariff law were imposed on certain classes of sugar. Mr. Knowlton wrote a scathing criticism of this action which was published in the Journal of Commerce of New York, and largely through his personal exertions, the importers and refiners were brought together in an agreement to bring a joint test case against the Government, in which they were successful, a large amount of money illegally exacted through erroneous Treasury rulings, being refunded by the Government.

Mr. Knowlton now resides in New York City, spending the summer at his country seat on Rockwell Hill, near Stafford Springs, Conn.

The main building and extension of this residence were built in 1878 by Danford Knowlton, father of the present owner, and the small building in the rear is the main part of the old homestead belonging originally to Park Rockwell, maternal grandfather of Miner R. Knowlton.

The farm and woodlands are part of an original and extensive grant to Samuel Rockwell, one of the first settlers in this part of Connecticut. The views are fine for miles around, and the air bracing and salubrious.

SARAH KNOWLTON FOSTER

the eldest daughter of Luke, and granddaughter of Silas Knowlton, is altogether and by common consent, the most prominent of all the living members of that branch of the Knowlton family of which she is so highly honored a member.

Endowed by nature with extraordinary physical and mental capacity, she impressed early in life her remarkable personality on all who came within the sphere of her influence. With the blood of many generations of vigorous Knowltons in her veins, the assertion will not be challenged that she has, through a long and useful life, combined and accentuated the virtues of her ancestors. She was married June, 1844, to Hiram Sewell Foster, Esq., Registrar for Stafford County, son of Dr. Stephen S. Foster, and brother of the Hon. A. B. Foster. He was one of the earliest and most prominent settlers in the Eastern Townships, and in every movement and enterprise for the material, moral, and political welfare of the people of the Province he took an active and influential part. The railway enterprises to which the Province owes so much of its present prosperity were fathered by him, and to his serious cost. He was successively Registrar, Councillor, and Warden of Brome County, and Justice of the Peace, all of which trusts, with many others, he administered with singular fidelity and integrity. He died suddenly of heart disease, at Saratoga Springs, June 28, 1878, aged 63, lamented by a host of friends throughout the entire Province. After her husband's death Mrs. Foster became more than ever, and of necessity, a woman of affairs, but in the management of her household and of her property interests, she has not abated her interest and influence in current events and topics, and in all local enterprises of social and religious concern. The parish church which the Knowltons built, and which they have fostered, is still the care of this loyal churchwoman, their worthy successor.

JULIUS W. KNOWLTON.

Julius William Knowlton was born in Southbridge, Worcester County, Mass., November 28, 1838. His father, William S. Knowlton, was a contractor and bridge builder, much of whose handiwork remains along the older railroads of Connecticut, and in some of the existing structures of Bridgeport city. From Southbridge the father of Julius removed to Norwich, Conn., and thence to Bridgeport, where the subject of this sketch received his education in the public and private schools. He was a bright scholar and left school with a very fair education in the ordinary English essentials. He engaged in the retail coal business after leaving school, until the breaking out of the Rebellion, when, in company with other patriotic young men whose ardor was aroused by the call to arms, he enlisted as a private in Company "A" Fourteenth Regiment Connecticut Volunteers. When the regiment was organized he was made Commissary Sergeant, and as such served till promoted to a Lieutenantcy of Company "C." Immediately after taking the field the regiment was ordered into active service, and in twenty-three days after leaving Hartford participated in the terrible battle of Antietam, where it lost one hundred and thirty-seven men in killed and wounded. This regiment during its term of service was engaged in thirty-four battles and skirmishes, including the battle of Gettysburgh, where Lieutenant Knowlton was wounded while in command of the color company in the famous charge on the "Bliss Buildings." He remained in the field hospital for eleven days, thence to Baltimore, and later was sent to his home in Bridgeport. In January, following, he again went to the front, but on account of his wound he was unable to do arduous military duty, and in March, 1864, was discharged for disability. His military service was faithful and honorable, his standing in the regiment excellent, and the subsequent commendation of his surviving comrades attests their respect for his record. After leaving the army Mr. Knowlton, with Maj. L. N. Middlebrook, purchased an interest in the Bridgeport "Standard" of the Hon. John D. Candee, and the gentlemen named organized a company of which Mr. Knowlton was secretary and treasurer and business manager. During Mr. Knowlton's connection with the Company, the fine building was erected which it now owns and occupies on the corner of Fairfield avenue and Middle street. During his connection with the "Standard," Mr. Knowlton first made his appearance in politics. The paper was thoroughly Republican, and its influence was great throughout western Connecticut. For a period of about three years, during his connection with the "Standard," he resided in the town of Stratford, whence he was sent to the Legislature for two terms, serving the town with ability and winning general respect. He was made a member of the Republican State Committee for his district, and was appointed Aide on the staff of Governor Marshall Jewell with the rank of Colonel. Subsequently returning from Stratford to Bridgeport, he resigned his position in the "Standard" Association to accept the superintendency of a large car wheel company in Jersey City, N. J., in 1873, a concern which at that time was very prosperous. The sudden death of the head of the concern, together with "Black Friday," disarranged all of Mr. Knowlton's plans, and necessitated the winding up of the business. At this time Hon. Marshall Jewell was placed at the head of the post-office department, and at once offered Mr. Knowlton a prominent position in that service. This position was accepted, and in less than three months he was promoted to the position of chief clerk of the department, and then acquired that knowledge of the postal business, and method in the management of postal affairs which subsequently was of so great benefit to him. In the fall of 1875 he was appointed Postmaster at Bridgeport, serving until November, 1886, when he was removed for partisan reasons only, his office being in admirable condition, and the heavy and constantly increasing business handled in a manner satisfactory to the public. After the election of President Harrison he was, by general consent, promptly accorded his former position as Postmaster at Bridgeport, and in May, 1889, resumed the increased and still more complicated duty with the same energy, good management, and success which had characterized his previous official career; December 31, 1893, he turned over his office to a successor of a different political belief. Aside from his official life Mr. Knowlton has been prominent and useful in many ways. He is a high Mason, having taken all of the degrees to and including the thirty-third in the Scottish Rite, and in all of the best work of the Masonic order he has part. He is a member of the military order of the Loyal Legion of the United States, of the Army and Navy Club of Connecticut, and of the Seaside and Algonquin Clubs of Bridgeport. In the regimental organization of the Fourteenth Connecticut Volunteers, Mr. Knowlton has been elected secretary for thirty-three successive years. At the death of the late able and popular Maj. Kinney of Hartford, secretary of the Army and Navy Club of Connecticut—an organization composed of the best of the survivors of the Rebellion, without regard to rank—Mr. Knowlton was unanimously elected to the vacant secretaryship, and has been his own successor for seven consecutive terms. No more substantial recognition of his ability and standing, and no more thorough endorsement could have been given him by his comrades. Mr. Knowlton is also a member of the Grand Army of the Republic; has been Assistant Adjutant General, member of the National Council of Administration, and was a delegate to the National Encampment of 1880. In December, 1866, he married Jennie E. Fairchild, of Newtown, Conn., from which union there were born to them two sons, both of whom died in infancy. In the city where the greater portion of his life has been passed, Mr. Knowlton is regarded as a genial and courteous gentleman, a prompt and thorough business man and a respected citizen. As a politician he has been active and prominent in every great political canvass since he became a voter, and has been an unswerving Republican from the first. He has assisted in the councils of his party on all occasions, and his aid has been important and valuable. Among his intimate friends he is esteemed for the social graces which make his hospitality unusually enjoyable, and for his high character and record in all the relations of public and domestic life.

William S. belonged to the famous Ellsworth Zouaves, who figured so conspicuously in the War of the Rebellion, having enlisted when little more than a youth. He was strikingly handsome in feature and figure, and a great favorite. For many years he was connected with the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. He d. in Rock Island, Ill., April, 1874.

3745 James W. and Mary Riddle had no children. James W. was preparing for college in Andover, Mass., when the war broke out. His youth being a bar to his joining a Massachusetts regiment, he enlisted in a New York regiment, and served in the Southern campaigns, severely injuring his health by exposure to the malaria of the swamp lands. After the war he studied law in the office of Stewart, Riddle & Stevens, in Washington, but his health induced him to adopt the profession of a journalist. He represented, as correspondent, a large number of the leading papers of the day, the income from which ($2000 a month) sufficiently evidences the value put on his services. In the difficult and delicate task of obtaining and transmitting early and accurate information of all important events at the National Capitol, talents of the highest order were indispensable. Acting almost with the intuitive knowledge of inspiration, careful, discriminating and just, scholarly and brilliant to an unusual degree, he quickly gained an enviable reputation, and his pen was in request from the most exacting journals in the land.

He m. Mary, daughter of Hon. A. G. Riddle, of Washington, D. C., in June, 1873. Unremitting devotion to his work still further undermined an already impaired health, and he d. after a brief illness, November, 1873, only five months after his marriage. Such leading papers as the "Chicago Tribune,"

"Louisville Courier-Journal," "Cleveland Leader," "Buffalo Courier," "Dubuque Times," and all the Washington dailies paid eloquent and pathetic tributes to his talents and virtues.

His widow resides in Washington, D. C.

3746 LOUISE WOLCOTT KNOWLTON AND GENERAL WM. H. BROWNE

had no children. She resides in Washington, D. C., where she holds a prominent position in society and church circles, and in charitable enterprises, and is specially interested in genealogical and patriotic society matters, being the Historian of the Society of Colonial Dames of America for the District of Columbia. General W. H. Browne is a lineal descendant of the old Huguenot family of Brownet expatriated by the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. His ancestor entered the service of William of England, and the military profession has continued unbroken since that day, the father of the subject of this sketch having been an officer in the English army.

The General was born in this country and served with honor in the Mexican War, after which he was admitted to the practice of law in the Supreme Court of N. Y., and, in 1856, in the Supreme Court of the U. S., before which he still practices. At the breaking out of the Civil War, he organized at his own expense fourteen companies of soldiers, all of whom were drafted into various regiments. He became Col. of the 36th N. Y. Regiment, went to the front, fought at Bull Run, Salem Heights and Fredericksburg, being severely wounded. During the "Reconstruction" he was Inspector General of Maryland and Delaware. The Legislature of Maryland voted him $10,000 as a recognition of his mild and beneficent rule during trying times, and among his accumulated honors were the tenders of the Chief Justiceship of Utah, the Associate Justiceship of Kansas, and a Judgeship of a District Court of N. York. He is the author of "Browne on Trade Marks" and other legal works.

MAJOR HARRISON DODGE.

is Commandant of Mt. Vernon, D. C., the resting place of George Washington. He is a lineal descendant of the Dodges of Ipswich, Mass., who owned estates adjoining those of the Knowltons. Jabez Dodge married Marjery Knowlton, Nov. 25, 1718, and it is a remarkable, if not a romantic, circumstance that after seven generations the family lines come together again in the persons of Harrison Dodge and Elizabeth Plympton Knowlton. Major Dodge's ancestor was Col. Robert Dodge, of General Washington's Staff, and on the maternal side he descends from the Governor Howell family, of New Jersey, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and from the English Admiral Vernon, in whose honor Mt. Vernon was named by Laurence, half brother of George Washington.

HON. HOSEA MORRILL KNOWLTON

was born at Durham, Maine, May 20, 1847. As he was the son of a clergyman, his early domestic life was an itinerant one, taking in its range Durham, Hampden, Auburn, and Oldtown, Maine; Keene, N. H.; South Boston and New Bedford, Mass.; in the last-mentioned of which he fixed his permanent residence. He prepared for College at the High Schools of Oldtown and Bangor, Maine, Keene, N. H., and Powers Institute, Bernardston. Entering Tufts College, he was graduated in 1867, and after reading law for three years in the Harvard Law School, he was graduated therefrom, and admitted to the Bar in 1870. He then opened a Law Office in New Bedford, where he has since practised with such marked success as to make his record a matter of general public interest. In less than two years after he began to practise, he was appointed Registrar of Bankruptcy, for the First District of Massachusetts, holding the office until it was legally abolished. From 1874-1877 he was a member of the School Committee of New Bedford, City Solicitor in 1875, Representative in 1876-7, State Senator in 1878-9, District-Attorney for the Southern District of Massachusetts, 1879-93, and in 1894 he was elected Attorney General of the State. This public service, continuous almost from his graduation, is an admirable illustration of the old Persian proverb that "A stone that is fit for the wall will not be left in the way."

was b. in Liberty, Me., rem. to Philadelphia, and thence to Branford, Canada, where he built up a large business in the manufacture of spring beds. From thence he rem. to Washington, continuing in the same business until his health obliged him to retire.

He enlisted in the 1st Regiment, Maine Volunteers, Heavy Artillery, and was in numerous engagements at Cold Harbor, Petersboro, and other places, receiving serious wounds that permanently impaired his health. The character of the service is readily seen from the fact that of the entire regiment 420 were killed in battle. Dallas saved a large train of supplies from capture by the enemy at Spottsylvania, and rendered other signal services to his country.

He now resides in Washington, D. C.

GEORGE COGSWELL KNOWLTON

was born in Hopkinton, N. H., September 28, 1834. His father was a farmer, and afterwards a merchant. When but seventeen years old, George left the Hopkinton Academy, and entered the service of the Concord & Clearmont R. R., as baggage-master and brakeman. Two and a half years later he went West, and engaged with the Chicago & Alton R. R. as conductor, and there laid the foundation of his extensive railway knowledge, influence, and acquaintance. He was subsequently in the employ of the great railway systems of the West and South-west, the Michigan Central, Vandalia, the Bee Line, Ohio & Mississippi, and Missouri Pacific System, in which he not only rose from the position of conductor to that of superintendent, but he was repeatedly offered and declined places of greater emolument and wider scope.

No man in all the West was more widely known, or more devotedly loved, in railroad circles than Mr. Knowlton. In person he was strikingly handsome being over six feet in height, and weighing over two hundred pounds, in manner most affable and courteous, and his integrity won and preserved the unlimited confidence of his employers. His experiences and adventures during the earlier and more perilous days of railroading in the West and South-west would, if reduced to writing, make a most entertaining volume. Leading capitalists and railway managers often solicited his judgment and opinions on business policy, and he was on intimate terms with a host of influential and prominent men. He married Miss Mary A. Higbee, of Remsen, N. Y., a most estimable woman, who died at St. Louis, February 17, 1887. They divided their residence between St. Louis and Whitesboro, a neighboring suburb, in each of which they had a congenial, comfortable, and hospitable home.

In 1875, George retired from active service and with an ample fortune, but after a short rest he longed for the active life and pleasant associates of his chosen vocation, and he, therefore, resumed his connection with the Missouri Pacific System, and continued it until the end of his life. Although an intense patriot, and thoroughly democratic in feeling, he took a lively interest in genealogical researches, and to his encouragement is due, in large part, the English Chapter of this History, and the successful authentication of the Coat-of-Arms.

Mr. Knowlton was an enthusiastic member of the Masonic Fraternity, and connected with Utica Lodge, No. 47, Oneida Chapter, No 57, R. A. M. ; Utica Council, No. 28, R. & S. MR. JAMES KNOWLTON, Sutton, N. H.

JAMES KNOWLTON

twin brother of Ezekiel was born in New London, N. H., December 7, 1828. He was educated here and at Sutton, N. H., and when but twenty-three years old he was left to administer the estate of his deceased father. In 1853 he removed to Sutton, where, in company with Mr. Wm. H. Marshall, whose daughter he married, he was engaged in the lumber business and also ran a saw-mill. He extended his business to Connecticut and Delaware, and later on became a contractor and builder, doing business in Manchester, Concord, Troy, Peterboro, Jaffrey, and Newport, Cambridge, Mass., and other places. He has also given considerable attention to agriculture and fruit culture. In 1875, he served as Town Clerk of Sutton.

Mary Frances Marshall, his wife, was born in Hopkinton, N. H. Her father was one of its early settlers, and a man of extraordinary capacity in agricultural and scientific pursuits. His daughter inherited her father's mental energy, for at fifteen years of age she became a successful teacher, and her poetical and prose writings were in constant request at local entertainments. Her married life has been an unbroken record of loving devotion to her family, whose careers reflect credit on her intelligent and conscientious training.

Its happy uniformity was broken by an exciting episode when her oldest son was a youth. He had broken through the ice on Sutton Pond, and when the news reached her she bounded like a deer to the bank, leaped a distance of eight feet into the ice, broke her way with her hands, and brought her drowning boy safely to land, at the imminent risk of her own life. James and Mary F. Knowlton still reside at Sutton, the evening of their life being brightened by the esteem of neighbors and by the love of a large family, all of whom "rise up and call them blessed."

4041 Ezekiel Knowlton, twin brother of James, was b. in New London, N. H. When nineteen years of age he went to Maryland, canvassing for a Northern publishing house. He also taught school in Farmington, Md. Here he fell ill of malarial fever, and after recovery he returned home, dying there suddenly November 7, 1851.

Major William was wounded at Winchester, Va., while commanding 29th Maine Inf., September 19, 1864 ; died next day.

MAJOR WILLIAM KNOWLTON

was born in New Portland, Maine, April 5, 1830. From his boyhood he had displayed the greatest interest in military affairs, and while yet a young man his enthusiasm, tempered by rare judgment and sound sense, had so won the confidence and esteem of his fellows that he was appointed an officer in the Lewiston Light Infantry. His theoretical soldiership was tested in a severe school of actual warfare on the breaking out of the great Rebellion, for he promptly enlisted, being commissioned First Lieutenant in the 1st Maine Infantry, May 3, 1861. On the 4th of October following, he was promoted to a captaincy in the 10th Regiment, Maine Infantry. On November 13, 1863, he was commissioned Captain of Company F, 29th Regiment, Maine Veteran Volunteer Infantry, and on the 30th of the same month and year he was promoted to the rank of Major, for gallant and meritorious conduct. Among the desperate and bloody battles in which he fought were those of Winchester, Cedar Mountain, Sabine Cross Roads, Pleasant Hill, and Opequan, in the last of which he received wounds in the throat, from which he died September 20, 1864.

In his history of the 1st, 10th, and 29th Maine Regiments, Major John M. Gould says of Major Knowlton—

“to us nothing was half so sad as his (Knowlton’s) death, for though he lingered till the next day, we knew that his wound was mortal. He had grown steadily in favor with the officers and men of our regiment, and had been recognized outside as an officer of superior merit.” General Dwight says in his report, “in the death of Colonel Peck, of the 12th Conn., and of Major Knowlton, of the 29th Maine, the Division lost two of its most gallant and efficient commanders.”

A singular premonition of his own death cast a shadow over the usually animated face of Knowlton, as his regiment stood waiting for the deadly grapple at Opequan, and calling Capts. Turner and Whitmarsh, he bade them look sharply to the welfare of the whole regiment after he should have fallen. The outward calm of his face, and the resolute courage of his heroic spirit, were in no wise disturbed as the red tide of battle rolled on, and when the prophecy that had been whispered secretly to his soul had its fulfilment, Major Gould declared—“he was the finest officer, all things considered, that our regiment ever produced.”

He enlisted December, 22 1861, and was assigned to Company H., 19th Mass. Volunteers. In the campaign which immediately followed he fought with conspicuous bravery. In the terrible and sanguinary Battles of the Peninsula and White Oak Swamp he was a participant, being wounded in the latter engagement. No tidings having been received of him since the desperate struggle on June 30, 1862, the necessary conclusion is that he died there of his wounds.

was b. in Rindge, N. H. He was educated in the public schools and under private tutors in his native State, and was himself a teacher for a short time. For several years he was connected with publishing houses in New York, Boston, and Philadelphia, from which business, by a transition natural enough, he withdrew to the editorial chair, managing and editing a newspaper in Fitchburg, Mass. In 1876, he published a history of Rindge, N. H., and in the following year a history of Ashburnham, Mass., works that evidenced critical scholarship and patient historical investigation. It was inevitable that he should be summoned to assume the responsibilities, and to wear the well-earned honors, of office, and in all these he has had a liberal part. For more than twenty years he has been Moderator of Rindge. He represented his native town for six years in the Legislature, and was State Senator in 1887 and 1889. He was elected Secretary of State in 1891, and re-elected in 1893 and 1895. An ardent Republican in politics, a born statesman in his grasp of public questions and policies, a keen, ready, and forcible debater, he is a recognized leader of men and of affairs, a fact shown by his assignment on legislative committees, to whom were entrusted the most difficult and laborious legislative work. The adoption of the Australian ballot in elections was simultaneous with his entrance upon the duties of Secretary of State, and the successful application of that reform measure won for him general commendation. Mr. Stearns received the honorary degree of Master of Arts from Dartmouth College in 1887, a well-merited recognition of his broad culture and literary attainments.

judgment the advantage of a cordiality and affability of manner that wins and binds with hooks of steel a host of friends. He is the V. Pres. of the Knowlton Association. He married Elia, daughter of Dr. Elijah Carpenter, of Chatham, Mass., who died of paralysis, in Brooklyn, N. Y., March 30, 1878, after an illness of one year. Her sweet and unostentatious life was a revelation to all who knew her of the blessedness of consecrated wealth. Her charities were unbounded, and in her charming simplicity, and dignity of character she never let her left hand know what her right hand was doing. In the church of her love (Grace Episcopal), in the cultivated social circles of which she was so conspicuous an ornament, and in the sacred seclusion of her domestic life, she has left a precious memory.

5120 Eliza C. Knowlton

died suddenly, at West Upton, Mass., April 9, 1868. She never married, but devoted her life to the interests and happiness of her immediate family circle, and of many beyond it. A superior woman both by natural gifts and personal attainments, she was by all beloved in life, regretted in death.

5121 George W. and Sarah Plummer had :

- (6994) Eliza C., March 15, 1869. m. Joseph L. Keith, April 24, 1895.
- (6995) William, March 30, 1872.
- (6996) George W. Jr., July 15, 1874.
- (6997) Robert T., February 5, 1877.
- (6998) Harold, September 16, 1882.

George W. resides in West Upton, and is the resident head of the business of manufacturing straw goods. In his conscientious devotion to the interests of the firm, and to all that concerns the welfare of his native town and of its individual inhabitants, he fills the honored position, and continues the beneficent work, of his lamented father, at the serious expense of health and strength. He married Miss Sarah Plummer of Northbridge, Mass.

5122 Charlotte E. Knowlton and Eli W. Bachelor had :

- (6999) Caroline M., June 19, 1870. d. May 31, 1892.

They res. in the William Knowlton homestead at West Upton, where a refined hospitality is delightfully dispensed. Mr. Bachelor was formerly engaged in mercantile pursuits, but is now connected with the manufacturing house of Wm. Knowlton & Sons.

Mrs. Bachelor is prominent in all efforts for the improvement of the people of the town in literary, charitable, and religious matters. The life of this interesting family was grievously saddened by the death of their only child, Caroline M., in the bloom of her youth. This lovely and gentle child had impressed herself, to an unusual degree, on the domestic life of kindred and friends, and the memory of her virtues is now a sacred possession of every household in her native town, and far beyond.

5123 Eben J. and Mary Beers had :

- (7000) Ella F., September 10, 1876.

- (7002) Grace Whitney, April 17, 1880.
- (7003) Mabel, April 2, 1882. d. young.

Eben J. res. in Brooklyn, N. Y., and has charge of the important department of designs at the salesrooms of Knowlton & Sons, N. York City.

It is, in its way, an illustration of the increasing demands of an advanced civilization that, in place of the original three shapes in the goods manufactured by this firm, there are now so many that only an artist can meet the demands of the market. This Mr. Eben J. Knowlton does, by a clever and diligent anticipation of changing fashions—a most vital part of this interesting business. He m. Miss Mary Beers, dau. of Johnathan Beers, Esq., of Black Rock, Bridgeport, Conn.

5124 Daniel W. and Mary A. Frost had :

- (7008) Daniel W., Jr., April 7, 1881.
- (7009) Don J., August 31, 1885.
- (7010) Phillip B., August 1, 1893.

Daniel W. res. in West Upton. Having a strong literary bent, there was marked out for him a professional career, but an impaired eyesight obliged him to abandon his studies and devote himself to business. He was the youngest partner in the house of Knowlton & Sons, and superintended the packing and shipping of goods. Public spirited like his father, affable and industrious, he was one of West Upton's representative citizens.

Naturally of a retiring disposition, his voice was seldom heard in public, but when some matter of public interest involving the welfare of his native town appealed to him he was always at the front, and on the side of liberal public spirit. The educational and religious interests of his native town were vital to him, and the impetus he gave them will transmit his name and virtues to generations to come, as they enjoy the benefits he so largely helped to confer. N. Y. In 1856 he transferred his business to the wider and more active field of Chicago.

At the breaking out of the War of the Rebellion the ancestral martial spirit asserted itself, and he entered the Navy as Third Assistant Engineer by the appointment of Hon. Gideon Welles, the then Secretary of the Navy. He served successively on the Unadilla and Pawtucket of the North Atlantic squadron, doing very effective service in maintaining the blockade, and in capturing prizes from the enemy. Among these, was the new iron steamer Princess Royal, an English ship heavily laden with a very valuable assorted cargo, and, what was vastly more important, the iron and complete equipment for a Confederate Iron Clad. This was one of the largest prizes of the whole war. Mr. Knowlton was in the two naval attacks on Fort Fisher under Admiral Porter, the latter of which was successful after three days' hard fighting, and he pushed up the James River past the Confederate batteries and earth-works in time to see burning Richmond light up the retreat of Lee's Army. He was promoted to the rank of Second Assistant Engineer, by President Andrew Johnson, July 26, 1865. At the close of the war he was ordered to Brooklyn Navy Yard to superintend the construction of the machinery for two new frigates.

In 1867 he visited China, Japan, and all the principal Asiatic countries, islands, and ports, coasted around Africa and South America, and returned home by way of San Francisco. On this long and memorable cruise he was the special correspondent of the "New York Herald," and was the first to give to the public much of the interesting and exciting news from the Dark Continent. His last cruise was in the West Indian waters on the Ironclad Monitor Terror, after which he resigned, and has since conducted a Real Estate business in Chicago.

S. Circassia* for Port Royal, March 18, 1863, and joining the sister ship, Conemaugh, at Georgetown, S. C.

He participated in the first bombardment of the U. S. forts in Charleston Harbor. In January, 1864, he sailed on the Conemaugh from Philadelphia for New Orleans, and was in the bombardment at Mobile Bay under Admiral Farragut, when the Confederate Ram Atlanta was captured, and the U. S. Ironclad Tecumseh was sunk by a torpedo of the enemy. After serving several months longer in naval operations at the South, the Conemaugh returned to Philadelphia for repairs, and Ingersoll resigned, March 17, 1865. MRS. MARY LOUISA KNOWLTON GRIFFITH,
Albany, N. Y.

By marriage of ancestors Mrs. Griffith is lineally descended from the New England families of Burton, Farnham, Ford, Russell, Pinder, Wilson, Bennett, Allen, Holt, Jewett, Stirling, Lewis, Freeman, Paine, Doane, Snow, Mayo, Collier, Carpenter, Hopkins, Prince, Treat, Bangs, Lumpkin, Southworth and the German Palatinate families of Rowe and Winegar. Of these the families of Farnham, Pinder, Ford, Allen, Holt, Stirling, Lewis, Freeman, Paine, Doane, Hopkins, Treat, Southworth, Prince, and Rowe, were entitled to, and used, registered Coats-of-Arms.

Of this ancestry, Mrs. Griffith represents Lieutenant Daniel Knowlton (Conn.), Sergeant John and Major Robert Freeman (N. Y.), in the "Society of Daughters of the Revolution," and Mr. Stephen Hopkins in the "Society of Mayflower Descendants."

She was born at Greenbush Village, Rensselaer County, N. Y. Her early education was obtained at the East Greenbush and Nassau Academies and Tyler's Institute of Pittsfield, Mass., the latter being at the time one of the best female educational institutions in the land. She was married at Nassau, N. Y., 29 September, 1852, to Edwin Henry Griffith, of Nassau, her parents having removed to the latter place from Greenbush about 1848. She resided at Nassau after her marriage until 1865, when she removed to Castleton, N. Y., where her husband founded the National Bank of Castleton.

In 1875, owing to the failure of her husband's health, Mrs. Griffith removed to Denver, Colorado, and two of the children accompanied the family. The youngest child Grace, died in Denver, February 5, 1875. Soon after this sad event Mr. Griffith started East for home with his family, and lived only a short time after reaching Albany. The elder son, George Smith, who had been pursuing his studies at Oberlin College, Ohio, died the following year, so that three loved members of this circle were snatched away within a year, and the widow left with but one surviving child. She has since made Albany her home and until his marriage in 1892, her son William Herrick made his home with her at 328 Hudson Avenue. Since her son's marriage she has lived alone with her mother at the above address where she now resides. Mrs. Griffith's country house "Glenwood" is charmingly located near Castleton-on-Hudson, N. Y., where she usually resides during a portion of the year. She has about 100 acres of land at "Glenwood."

Having heard from early childhood, and from her father's and grandfather's lips, the stories of the Revolution, and having learned from them the valiant deeds of her ancestors in that memorable struggle, and also having met as a guest at her father's house, General (then Captain) Nathaniel Lyon, she has from youth ever cherished the deepest love for, and the keenest interest in, the annals and traditions of the Knowltons. Therefore she was one of the first to interest herself in the History of the family and in the formation of the Association.

She has ever held up to her children the example of all noble heroes who served their country in every age, but more especially her own ancestors whose services received the commendation of Washington himself, and, later in the Civil War, the highest praise from the Commander-in-Chief, and whose names became household words.

She is a Presbyterian in religious belief, and is a communicant of the State Street Presbyterian Church, Albany, N. Y.

EDWIN HENRY GRIFFITH

was born at Nassau, Rensselaer County, N. Y., December 1, 1830, and received his early education and preparation for college at the Nassau Academy. He soon after entered Oberlin College, Ohio, which he left after a short time for Yale College. At Yale he was one of the brightest men in his class, and a member of the "Kappa Sigma Theta" Fraternity. Upon leaving college he was married at Nassau, September 29, 1852, and embarked in the milling business at that place. By close application and judicious management he soon built up a prosperous business, principally in the sale of rye flour and feed, which he shipped to large firms in New York City and other places. In 1864, he sold out his mills and removed to Castleton-on-Hudson, Rensselaer County, N. Y., where he established the banking business of the place, founding the National Bank of Castleton, with which he was officially connected as cashier until the failure of his health in October, 1874. While a resident of Castleton he was always prominently identified with the business and religious interests of the place, was active in Church affairs and interested in all public improvements. He was an officer of the Dutch Reformed Church and Superintendent of the Sunday-School. Two years previous to his leaving Castleton, a severe attack of pleurisy left him with a cough which later developed into consumption, and wishing to try the climate of Colorado and California, he resigned his position in the Bank, and made the journey West in October, 1874, stopping for the winter in Denver. Here his health failed rapidly, and after the death of his only daughter, Grace, (which occurred in Denver,) finding that he could not live in that climate, and realizing also that he could not survive for a very long time, he returned in the spring to his Eastern home, and soon after reaching Albany died, May 16, 1875. He was a man universally esteemed, and during his successful career made many friends and kept them. He was known for his sterling integrity and Christian character, and never wavered in the path of duty. He was the only son of

who was born 20th April, 1793, and was a man of prominence in his native town (Nassau, Rensselaer County, N. Y.)

He occupied nearly all the official positions in the gift of the town, was an elder in the Presbyterian Church there, and a noted Abolitionist in War times.

During the Anti-Slavery agitation he helped carry on the "Underground Railroad," as it was called, and by his instrumentality many slaves escaped to Canada. He did much to improve Nassau in many ways, and was always active in any measure to increase its prosperity. His first wife was Lemira Herrick (born 30th April, 1793, died 15th November, 1859), daughter of John and Nancy (Platt) Herrick. Lemira was SECOND in lineal descent from Colonel Rufus Herrick, of the New York Continental Line in Revolutionary War; SEVENTH in lineal descent from Sir William Herrick, of London, Leicester, and Beau Manor Park (one of the most distinguished courtiers at the Court of Elizabeth); and EIGHTEENTH in lineal descent from Eric, King of Denmark. She made use of the Arms granted to Sir William Herrick by Queen Elizabeth, and which are registered in the Herald's College as follows: "Argent; a fesse vaire or and gules. Crest—A bull's head, couped argent, horned erased sable and gorged with a chaplet of roses ppr. Motto—Virtus omnia nobilitat."

Her mother's father was Captain Israel Platt, of the N. Y. Line in War of Revolution, who was a grandson of Major Epenetus Platt of Colonial time. She was also FIFTH in lineal descent from Capt. John Stanton of the Colonies, and SIXTH from Thomas Stanton, Interpreter-General to the Colonies and Assistant to Gov. Winthrop; SIXTH in descent also from Captain John, and SEVENTH from Captain George Denison, a noted leader in King Philip's War, and SEVENTH also in descent from Captain James Avery of the same War. By this marriage Smith, above, had two children, a son Edwin Henry (mentioned above), and a daughter Mary. Some years after the death of his wife Lemira, Smith Griffith married the widow of Mr. Chester Griswold of Troy. He had no children by this marriage. He died of old age and general decline, 22d February, 1878, in the 86th year of his age. He was son of

MAJOR JOSHUA GRIFFITH

(born 8th February, 1763, died 10th April, 1830). He came in later life to Nassau, N. Y., and lived about a mile from Nassau Village. He participated in many of the actions in War of 1812. His Militia Commission as a Captain in Lt. Col. Nicholas Staat's Regiment and dated 30th March, 1803, also his Commission dated 10th April, 1811, as a Major in Lt. Col. Cornelius J. Schermerhorn's Regiment, Rensselaer County Militia, can be seen in Secretary of State's Office, Capitol at Albany, in "minutes of Council of Appointment (Militia)," Book E., pp. 107 and 444. Also in "History of Rensselaer County, N. Y.," page 71, under heading "43d. Regt., Field and Staff." Just as the War of 1812 opened he was visiting his father in Central New York, and was mustered into Col. Mead's 17th N. Y. State Detached Militia Regiment, Captain Daniel Root's Company as a private, and performed active service in that capacity. After the war he returned to Nassau where he died. His wife, Ruth Paine, survived him. She was a daughter of Smith Paine and SIXTH in lineal descent from Stephen Paine of Rehoboth, Mass., who was one of the principal subscribers to King Philip's War, and a descendant of Hugh de Payen. MAJOR JOSHUA GRIFFITH, above, was a son of a Revolutionary soldier ; an early settler of Oneida County and he in turn was a direct lineal descendant of Llewellyn, last King of Wales, beheaded by the English in 1282, and of Griffith, his son, also King of Wales. The Griffith Arms are the same as those of Griffith of the Royal House of Wales, and belong to all of those of the name mentioned in these sketches.

Brownell who fought at Bunker Hill, being then but eighteen years old, great-grandson of Lieut. Johnathan Brownell, who died of wounds received in the same battle, and a lineal descendant of Thomas Church, a soldier at Bunker Hill, and of Col. Benjamin Church who served in King Philip's War.

Henrietta was educated at the best schools of the day, finishing at what is now known as the Ogontz Seminary of Pennsylvania. Her keen and vigorous intellect was enriched by foreign travel and study, and the cares of her domestic life did not divert her from music and literature.

She became a prolific writer, and her discriminating and vigorous pen soon gave her a place among contributors to the daily, weekly, and monthly papers and magazines, such as the "Providence Evening Telegram," "Bristol Phoenix," and the "Catholic World." She has published various serials and books.

CHARLES SAMUEL HALL

was born in Middletown, Conn., May 10th, 1827, and in 1837 removed to Binghamton, New York. He is the eldest son of Samuel Holden Parsons Hall and his wife, Emeline Bulkeley. The first of his name and line in this country was John Hall (Boston, 1633), who settled first in New Haven and afterwards removed to Wallingford, Conn. He numbers among his ancestors the Rev. John Eliot, the apostle to the Indians, Rev. Richard Mather, Rev. Charles Chauncey, second President of Harvard College, Rev. Peter Bulkeley, founder of Concord, Henry Wolcott and Matthew Griswold, the founders of the noted families of the name, Gov. William Brenton of Rhode Island, and Governors Thomas Welles and Jonathan Law of Connecticut. General Samuel Holden Parsons of the Continental army was his great-grandfather, and Gov. Lyman Hall, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, a cousin. On his father's side he traces back to Hugh Capet, and on his mother's to the Emperor Charlemagne. His family is distinctively a New England family, nearly every ancestor having come to this country during the great Puritan immigration which commenced in 1630, and none having removed from New England until his father, afterwards prominent in New York politics, and a member for two terms of the New York Senate, settled in Binghamton.

Mr. Hall was graduated from Yale College in 1848, and in August, 1850, he received from that college the degree of LL.B., and in 1851, that of A.M. He was admitted to the New York bar in January, 1851; to the U. S. District Court in May, 1879, and to the U. S. Circuit Court in August of the same year. He was appointed Commissioner of the U. S. Circuit Court for the Northern District of New York, December 13, 1856, and Master and Examiner in Chancery in November, 1879. The office of Commissioner of the Circuit Court having been abolished in June, 1897, he was immediately appointed to the new office of U. S. Commissioner created by the same act. Mr. Hall has continued to reside in Binghamton where he is still engaged in the practice of his profession, much of his time being occupied in the care of estates. He has held several important positions in the city government, and by request of a committee he drafted the first charter of the city, and revised the school laws.

Mr. Hall has always written more or less upon matters of public interest, having published articles on the Relation of the States to the General Government; on the Currency and on Education. Within the past year he has published "The Hall Ancestry," which has been received with considerable favor.

The family still occupies the old homestead on the banks of the Chenango, built by Mr. Hall in 1856, where broad lawns and a huge library, and more than all, a Knowlton presence, help to make life move pleasantly along.

6276 Edgar J. and Genevieve I. Blanchard had :

(7265) Bessie G., April 2, 1885.

(7266) Belle F., October 2, 1887.

The Hon, Edgar J. Knowlton is a native of Sutton, N. H. His boyhood differed but little from that of other New England country lads, who emerge from schools at an early age to gain their livelihood by manual labor. At the age of sixteen, young Edgar went to Manchester, N. H., where he secured a position as an apprentice in the printing-office of the "Manchester Union." A report of an evening lyceum lecture which he was half-seriously requested to write, evidenced such latent literary ability that he was given the position of reporter on the "Union." His services were so highly valued that he was rapidly promoted, and soon became Editor of the above paper. Its proprietorship having changed in 1880, Mr. Knowlton removed to Lockport, N. Y., where he took editorial charge of the "Lockport Daily Union." Preferring New England as a place of residence, he returned to Manchester the following year, taking an editorial position on the "Daily Mirror and American." In 1884, he resumed his old position as Editor of the "Union," which he resigned in 1890, in order to accept the Secretaryship of the Manchester Board of Trade. He was elected Representative in 1886, and Mayor of Manchester in 1890, and now holds the position of Postmaster. Although an enthusiastic Democrat, his extraordinary abilities and universal popularity have secured him the suffrages of a large number of political opponents, and he has been elected from a confirmed Republican stronghold. His time, money, and influence have been given unreservedly to the material, educational, and philanthropic interests of his fellow-citizens. The improvement of homes for work-people, the provision of popular and instructive entertainment for the masses, the preservation of the public health through improved sanitary measures, encouragement of public and athletic sports, everything, in short, which concerns the welfare of his fellow-men, are among the numerous activities of his heart and hand. Few men receive in such large measure as he the confidence and esteem of the public, and few men also have that versatility of talent and robust physique necessary to keep one in touch with so many and varied organizations and movements for private and public welfare.

himself as partner with Mr. Marshall in the apothecary business under the firm name of Marshall & Knowlton, with stores in two different parts of the city. The business has been prosperous, and it is continued still. Alice Colby is the lineal descendant of a pioneer settler and Revolutionary pensioner, whose family in England were of high rank. Being of a mechanical turn of mind, he turned his attention to steam engineering, which he continued as constructor and operator until 1886, when he was so severely injured in a railway collision that for a long time his recovery seemed impossible. After carrying on the business of railway supplies and mechanical rubber goods for two or three years, he returned to the East, and finally organized the "Knowlton Packing Company," for the manufacture and sale of goods of his own patented invention. He has been instrumental in furthering the interests of Railway Engineers' Associations with which he is exceedingly popular.

(7316) Philip E., 1874. Graduated from Case School of Applied Science, Cleveland, O.

Emory E. enlisted in the Civil War among the three-months men originally called out by President Lincoln. He subsequently re-enlisted in the 16th Ohio Regiment doing battery service, and, through bravery in the field, being promoted to a captaincy. Having been transferred to the Regular Army, he took command of a company of Southern Unionists in Mississippi, every member of which was six feet high, and where he encountered an organized insubordination, he promptly shot down a leading conspirator, and thus mastered the situation. After the war had ended he entered the legal profession in which he became prominent. He was a Commissioner for Ohio in the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia, and a member of the committee for revising the State Constitution, in the fulfilment of which duty he contracted an illness from which he died, January 8, 1875.

WILLIAM HERRICK GRIFFITH,
Albany, N. Y.

6993 Mary Knowlton and Count Johannes Von Franklin Sierstorppff had :

- (7402) Eddie.
(7403) Johannes.

Residence, Berlin, Germany.

Mary is the only daughter of Mr. Edwin F. Knowlton, of Brooklyn, N. Y. To a bountiful bestowal of natural gifts and graces was added every advantage that parental care and generosity could provide, and Miss Knowlton at once became a favorite. She was educated at the best educational institutions of the country, and extensive foreign travel utilized the theoretical studies of the school-room. She preserved a well-poised character amid all the admiration of polite society, and she took to her foreign home a better ideal of American womanhood than European society has sometimes received.

She married Count Sierstorppff, April 27, 1892, and the marriage has proved a most happy one.

6994 Eliza C. Knowlton and Joseph L. Keith had :

- (7404) George Knowlton, April 29, 1896.

Eliza C. was born in West Upton, Mass., and in the house where her parents now reside. She studied in her native town until she was fifteen years old, when she was placed in Miss Williams's Young Ladies Seminary, at Worcester, Mass. After a two or three years' course in this Institution, she continued her studies for two years in Miss Hershey's Select School in Boston, after which she went abroad and studied for one year more. Ranking high in scholarly attainments, and beloved for her many personal qualities, she was peculiarly fitted to adorn the elegant home in Grafton to which she removed on her marriage, April 24, 1895. After the example of her parents, and of the other members of this interesting West Upton family, she actively identified herself with the interests and work of church and Sunday school, and she carried with her to her own home the love of a community which was the better for her having lived in it.

Mr. Keith has an office in Boston where he does a limited brokerage business, though not properly speaking a broker, the management of his estates requiring most of his time and attention.

7137 William Herrick Griffith and Grace E. C. Robertson had :

- (7405) Margaret Frances, December 27, 1892.

WILLIAM HERRICK GRIFFITH

was born in Castleton-on-Hudson, Rensselaer Co., N. Y., January 27, 1866. He was named for Sir William Herrick of London, Leicester and Beau Manor Park, from whom he is NINTH in lineal descent. On his father's side he is lineally descended from the New England and Colonial families of HERRICK, Paine, Smith, Perrin, Trask, Leonard, Avery, Denison, Stanton, Starkweather, Lord, Thompson, Peck, Chickering, Cross and Lay, and Platts and Scudders of Long Island. Of these the Paines, Perrins, Herricks, Averys, Denisons, Stantons, Lords, Pecks, and Platts were entitled to, and made use of coats-of-arms. (For maternal descent, see sketch of Mary Louisa Knowlton.)

Mr. Griffith received his primary education at "Jane Coley's Private School for Boys" at Albany. He was partly prepared for College, at the Albany Military Academy where he held the rank of First Lieutenant when he left. After leaving the Academy, his collegiate preparation was completed under the private tuition of Reverend Charles H. W. Stocking, D.D. This was the beginning of a friendship which became stronger as years passed on, and through which came that interest in the Knowltons which resulted in the devotion of his tutor to a history of the family. Mr. Griffith entered Yale College in 1886, but did not complete the collegiate course owing to ill health. On leaving College he travelled in company with Dr. Stocking through England, Scotland, Germany, Holland, Belgium, Austria, France, Italy, and Switzerland, making his sojourn in these countries an educational one, to a great extent, and studying the archæology, life, and customs of the different places visited. Mr. Griffith contributed letters to American periodicals while abroad, and some of these were published by the "New York Home Journal" and the "Albany Argus."

Upon returning to his native land, the subject of our sketch accepted a responsible position in the First National Bank, of Albany, N. Y., resigning it to embark for himself in the Insurance business, which he still follows, holding the agencies of the "United States Fire Insurance Company of New York," and the "Royal" of Liverpool, and doing a Brokerage Life Insurance business also, at 37 Maiden Lane.

Mr. Griffith is an enthusiast on all matters pertaining to genealogy, history and the patriotic hereditary orders, and is actively engaged in ancestral searches. He was one of the first, if not the first to interest himself in an attempt to bring together the different members of the Knowlton family, and to collect in permanent form scattered genealogical material. He has in his possession many heirlooms and relics, chief among which he prizes the musket carried by his great-great-grandfather, Daniel Knowlton, while a private and Sergeant in the old French War; some Revolutionary Scrip with which he was paid off, and a few of his old books. At the formation of the Association, Mr. Griffith was the unanimous choice for Secretary and Treasurer, and he has occupied the position ever since, laboring faithfully to promote its prosperity.

As Treasurer (1896) and Secretary (1897) of Philip Livingstone Chapter,

MARGARET FRANCES GRIFFITH,
Albany, N. Y.

Sons of the Revolution, he has helped in a large degree to make it the influential and prosperous organization it now is.

The unusually prominent lines of ancestry Mr. Griffith can claim on both paternal and maternal sides, renders him eligible to nearly all of the patriotic hereditary orders and societies, and to nearly every one he belongs, representing in these different organizations twenty-five ancestors who performed illustrious Military and Civil services in the Colonies previous to 1775 : SIX ANCESTORS who were officers in the Continental Army during the Revolution, and TWO who rendered service in the War of 1812. Of the above he holds membership in the "Society of Sons of the Revolution," and in the "Society of Sons of the American Revolution," in right of services of and lineal descent from :

His application for membership is also before the "Order of Cincinnati." Mr Griffith is also an active member of the "New York Historical Society," "New England Historical Genealogical Society," "Albany Institute," "Albany Historical and Art Society," and often contributes to their collections of genealogical lore. He is a member of the Albany Club, a thirty-second degree Mason, being a member of "Masters Lodge No. 5, F. and A. M.," and of "Albany Sovereign Consistory, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite."

On February 3, 1892, he was married by Rev. J. S. B. Hodges, S. T. D., of Baltimore, and Rev. C. H. W. Stocking, D. D., of Orange, N. The genealogical line of this family presents some difficulties. Joseph (2113) who married a Harriet J. Temple, corresponds as to name and dates with the Joseph of the above family, but the children are different, except that each of the two families in question has a William of exactly the same date. However, the dates are such as to suggest the strong probability that the two sets of children are really those of the same parents, the family records of different members of the family being obviously imperfect.

The Joseph of this sketch is said to have been a cooper, to have been impressed into the British Navy during the War of 1812, from which he made his escape, and returned to the U. S.

CHAPTER IV.

The Knowltons of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick

IT has already been stated that the first emigrant from England bearing the Knowlton name had fixed on Nova Scotia as his future home, and that he did indeed find there his long home—a grave. When his widow and children, after a brief sojourn there, turned their faces towards New England, they probably little dreamed that a reflex wave of Colonial activity would land another of the race on the same soil. But over and among the western hills of Connecticut there was born, nearly a century later, in the old town of Ashford, the first Knowlton child in that section, Daniel (232), a son of Robert and Hannah (Robinson) Knowlton, the progenitor of a race of sturdy pioneers, who were to plant in a remote island wilderness the civilization and arts of a resolute and enterprising people. Daniel was born in 1726, the year after his parents removed from Sutton, N. H., and as his father was born in Ipswich he may have known something of the tradition concerning his great-great-grandfather, Capt. William, and of the part his ancestors had taken in the wars that disturbed those early days.

It is evident that he early caught the military spirit of the Knowltons. While the lad was unconsciously fitting himself on his father's farm for the hardships of a soldier's life, events were near at hand to prepare a theatre for a fresh display of Knowlton heroism. The peace of Utrecht had left the British in possession of Nova Scotia, and the French had retired to Cape Breton, and had constructed at Louisburg a fortress on a gigantic scale, intending to control the maritime, fishing, and commercial interests of that entire region. The French Government had expended about $5,000,000 on these works, and the flower of its army and navy had been collected here to the great and growing anxiety of English settlements on the opposite shores and in New England. The harbor of Louisburg was a favorite rendezvous for French privateers which seriously imperilled the interests of the British fisheries. In 1745 war was again raging between France and England, and in response to an appeal from the Governor of Nova Scotia, Governor Shirley of Massachusetts called for a volunteer force to reduce the strongest fortress on the Western Continent. Of this force Connecticut furnished 516 men, and among them was Daniel Knowlton, of Ashford. Whether he knew that among his fellow-soldiers were Benjamin, of Springfield, and other Massachusetts cousins, the first of whom fell in the thick of the fight, will always be an interesting conjecture.

Daniel Knowlton was now but nineteen years old, and as more volunteers offered their services than were needed, and only picked men were accepted, the legitimate inference is that he must have been a promising soldier.

His rank was that of Ensign, and he served in Col. Joseph Scott's Regiment, known as "Scott's Rangers." The significance of this enterprise must not be overlooked. It was the first really united effort of the colonial troops in a common cause of patriotism and self-defence. These troops were farmers, fishermen, mechanics, and clerks, none of whom knew or cared anything about the science of war, and who despised the technicalities of the profession. Their commander, the richest man in North America, William Pepperell, was a Boston merchant who had never smelt powder, and he and his men were to assail the strongest fortress on the Western Continent, and the best soldiery of Europe. This they did so effectually that, on the forty-ninth day of the siege the lilies of France were plucked by the strong paw of the British lion.

The glorious victory had been won by men who had no better shelter than mud and bush huts, and whose beds were the cold, wet earth. Their forlorn life before Louisburg had been enlivened, however, by rustic sports, and by more friendly association than soldiers usually have in the face of an enemy.

Knowlton had made many friends during the Louisburg Campaign, and he accepted the invitation of a Nova Scotia comrade to visit him at Nappan, a small village near Amherst. Returning to Ashford, he married in the year following Miss Zerviah Wadkins, daughter of Capt. William Wadkins of the Colonial army, by whom he had an interesting family of sons and daughters.

In 1758-9 Governor Lawrence of Nova Scotia, issued a proclamation inviting settlers to remove to his jurisdiction, and erect townships. This proclamation became known to Daniel Knowlton, and the favorable impression which the country and people had made upon him at the time of his visit induced him to join with Col. Joseph Scott, in whose regiment he had fought, Richard Upham, and fifty others in an application for a land grant. The application was successful, and a grant of 26,000 acres was made, from which was organized the township of Onslow at the head of Cobequid Basin. The little colony comprised three hundred and nine souls, and Knowlton was chosen moderator. The next year he returned to Massachusetts Bay, and brought back thirty families more, besides twenty head of horned cattle, eight horses, and seventy sheep. He had now brought his family from Ashford, Conn. (in 1760), and with them a negro slave, "Black Bob," as the Nova Scotians called him, and an object of intense curiosity and interest. His wife Zerviah died soon after their arrival, and his trials were increased by the privations and sufferings of his fellow-settlers. The second year's crops and roots were ruined by a long drought and severe frost, and one man, Joel Camp, died of starvation, his last meal being the end of a tallow candle. The British Government tardily supplied the necessities of life, and Knowlton determined to make a new venture.

He finally fixed on Advocate Harbor as his permanent home, and there he lived and died, after accumulating a respectable fortune.

He married 2d Mrs. Mary, widow of Col. Joseph Scott, in whose regiment he had served, and his joint-proprietor of Onslow. His daughter Eleanor married Nathan Upham, son of Richard Upham, a warm friend of Daniel in the Louisburg Campaign, and one of his associates in the founding of Onslow.

It does not appear that Daniel and Mary had children. He was long remembered as a man of striking appearance, very tall and large, and representing in his military bearing the ideal soldier.

Among the early records of Onslow Township is the following :

“ October 25, 1765. Then met according to Warrant of October 22, 1765.

Voted, Daniel Knowlton, Moderator.

2ly. Voted that they will chuse a committee to bring forward the Settlement of this town and get a grant.

3ly. Voted that Daniel Knowlton, James Wilson, and Peter Richardson be the committee for the purpose above sd.

Voted, that Daniel Knowlton go to Halifax for the grant.

Voted, that John Steel go with him for ditto, ditto.”

About 1770 Daniel sold the Onslow property and removed to Fort Sackville, where, in 1783, he secured a grant of 2000 acres of land on the Fort Cumberland Road, Cumberland Co., N. S., upon which property he finally settled. The grant was issued under the act of 1763, which provided for grants of lands to officers, sailors, and seamen taking part in the preceding French-Indian Wars.

He suffered paralysis in his later years, and died about 1795. His son, Daniel, sold the property last referred to, and removed to Advocate, whence the family has scattered in many directions through Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and the United States.

 DEED FROM WILLIAM KNOWLTON TO EDWIN BRAGG.

"All my commonage with the appertainings belonging to the house lot which I bought of John Andrews who bought the same of Thomas Bishop, who bought the same of Robert Hayes to whom the freemen of the town of Ipswich did grant the same for a house lot, and whereupon there hath been a house built, and upon occasion removed, the said land containing one acre, and it adjoyneth to the other lands where I now dwell, which I bought of William Sampson and William Storey having a lane leading towards the house of Joseph Medcalf towards the east and Ipswich towards the west, I do convey &c to Edward Bragg."

William's death has been erroneously fixed by Felt at 1644, for in 1648 he conveys other property situated on Break Neck Hill, a historic elevation in Ipswich. His death undoubtedly occurred in 1654 or 5, for an inventory of his estate was taken July 17, 1655.

No flow'ry Fields, no Warbling Groves
Befrend my trembling Lyre
The Cheerful Note, the mirthful Strain
My pensive Muse forbear

The sprightly youth forgets his Airs
The Bride her gay Attire
The chanting Viol lies unstrung
All earthly Joys expire.

And first of all to thee I turn
Joseph, "a fruitful Bough," Tow'rd thee my yearning Bowels move
Son of my Womb and Vow.

Be sure, my Son, God's Holy Word
Take for thy Standing Rule
Lo here ! lo there ! Do not regard,
But Search the heavenly Road.

But next to thee my Daughter dear,
Yoke—Fellow to my Son,
Eunice by Name, to thee I turn,
Thy Carriage mild I own.

To me and my descendant Race
(With Pleasure I relate !)
Thine be the Praises ever due
Down to the latest Date.

Oh ! follow, follow after Christ
 Secure the greatest Good !
 Nor let your heart cleave to the Dust
 But to the living God.

Be Kind, be liberal unto all
 That need thy Kindnesses,
 Nor let your Bowels—
 To any in distress.

There 's two behind I may n't forget,
 Young Zipporah dear by Name,
 With Vital Weakness hard beset Joyn'd with a burning Flame.

Dear Grandchild—whom I love and pray
 Dear Lord may pity you,
 And Send His Word of Power and heal
 Your Soul and Body too,

Lastly, besides, young Hannah dear,
 (My Grand-Child Motherless)
 Whom I commit to faithful Care
 So leave to Sovereign Grace.

Now to my Friends, my dearest Friends
 And Neighbors all in View
 I turn my dying Speech and Thanks
 For Kindness done by you.

And first of God I Pardon ask
 Forgiveness next of you,
 And all the World whom I forgive
 So all Farewell, Adieu !

Mary is dead, a Mother dear
 Grand-Mother, more a Saint.
 A tried Friend, a Neighbor near
 The Poor's Relief in Want.

She liv'd belov'd bemoan'd, She dy'd,
 Tears drop'd from every Eye,
 Like as the Sea, the Breach is Wide
 Wider as the broader Sky !

Thenceforth upon thy earthly bier
I'll daily shed the gushing tear
And waste in Sighs the tedious Stage
That closes life's Sad pilgrimage.

Then turned upon her little side
Disgusted with the draught, and died.

One thing is plain to all
God rules by natural laws
Eternal and Unchanged,
And man, like other living things

And grateful should he be.

THE REVEREND CHARLES HENRY WRIGHT
STOCKING, D.D.,

Historian of the Knowlton Family, was born in Norwich, Conn., one of the early homes of the Knowlton's. His ancestor George Stocking, came to America from the west of England in 1634, and was a member of the historic band of settlers who, under the leadership of Hopkins, travelled on foot from Boston to the Connecticut River, and who founded and settled Windsor, Hartford, and Middletown. George Stocking's participation in this pioneer enterprise is commemorated by a monument erected by the city of Hartford in the old Centre St. cemetery.

From him sprang a long line of descendants, most of whom remained on the banks of the Connecticut River, though branches of the family are found in most of the States of the Union. They were identified with the development of the Colony, they were uniformly prominent in all civil, political, and religious concerns, and they furnished twenty-eight soldiers for service in the Colonial and Revolutionary Wars. The Rev. Jeremiah Stocking, grandfather of the Historian, was for more than sixty years, a widely known minister of the Methodist denomination, whose father, Abner, was Capt. of an American Privateer during the Revolutionary War, Jeremiah being one of the crew when but sixteen years old.

The Stockings of Chatham and East Haddam were neighbors of Stephen and Mary Knowlton, and Joseph Stocking purchased a valuable estate of the latter in 1809. The Griffith and Williams families intermarried with both the Stockings and the Knowltons.

The Historian was educated at the Norwich Academy, graduated from Trinity College in 1860, with rank of Optimus; was Class Poet, Prize Man in Science, History, and Literature; Commencement Poet in 1863, and Doctor of Divinity in 1874. He has been rector of Christ Church, Ansonia, Ct.; Trinity Church, Rochester, N. Y.; Church of the Epiphany, Chicago; Grace Church, Detroit, Mich.; Trinity Church, Albany, N. Y.; and Priest-in-charge of the Church of the Holy Innocents, West Orange, N. J. He is now Principal of the Freehold Young Ladies' Seminary, Freehold, N. J.; Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of New Jersey; a Lecturer for the past twenty years at the Chautauqua University, assemblies, colleges, seminaries and educational circles, and a professional Genealogist. He has been a frequent and extensive traveller in foreign countries, and a contributor to many periodicals.

NATHAN KNOWLTON'S PETITION.

Application for certificate of Revolutionary services made by the identical party who rendered the services.

State of Massachusetts, county of Worcester, town of Auburn. The Secretary of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, is hereby requested to furnish evidence from the rolls in his office of the service of Nathan Knowlton, in the War of the Revolution.

He was a native of the town of Shrewsbury in said county of Worcester and State of Massachusetts. He enlisted from said town of Shrewsbury in said County of Worcester and State of Massachusetts in the month of November, in the year 1776 as a private in the company commanded by Capt., Moses Harrington of Grafton in said county of Worcester belonging to a Massachusetts Regiment of Militia commanded he thinks by a Col. Dike and he served as follows: He marched in the month of December following his enlistment to Dorchester in said State, there passed muster, and continued there until the first of the next May following, then returned home.

He afterward enlisted again as a private in the company commanded by Capt. Inglesberg of Boylston in said county of Worcester belonging to a Massachusetts Regiment of militia commanded by Col. Job Cushing and was then chosen a corporal and appointed a musician in said company. He then marched in pursuit of Gen. Burgoyne and was present when he surrendered, and saw him march into the marquee of Gen. Gates, and heard him salute the General in insulting language calling him "Granny Gates," who replied "Yes, I will own the title, for I have just delivered Great Britain of ten thousand men." He then marched down to near King's Bridge to take a fort, then returned home. He enlisted again, and was stationed a few months on Winter Hill. Afterwards he went from Rutland, Mass., with a division of prisoners to Enfield, Conn., and after that with a division to Providence, and from thence went to Charlestown and was there discharged.

I am now almost ninety-six years old, and my memory does not enable me to state the services in said Revolution, more fully and explicit than above stated nor do I deem it necessary to be more minute in this matter.

Witness my hand this twenty-fourth day of December A.D. 1855.

To provide for the necessary expenses of correspondence and for some work preliminary to the history proper, the membership fee was fixed at two dollars per annum, and it was decided to hold annual reunions. The meeting then adjourned after the enrollment of thirty Knowltons as Charter Members.

On February 25, 1896, the officers of the Knowlton Association met as an Executive Committee at Springfield, Mass., and were entertained by the President.

After the drafting of a Constitution and By-Laws, the meeting adjourned, having decided to hold the next reunion at Boston on the Anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill, June 17, 1896.

THE BOSTON REUNION

was held in the Hotel Vendome, a large number of Knowltons being present from Canada and New Brunswick, eastward, to Minnesota, westward. The Secretary being unavoidably detained by illness, his duties were shared by Mr. Leslie D. Knowlton of Boston and by the Historian.

The Reception Committee escorted the visiting members at 9 A.M. to the principal points of historic interest in and about the City, and from 3 to 4.30 P.M. the President and Mrs. Mary L. Griffith of Albany, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Knowlton Marcy of Windsor, Conn., Col. Chas. S. and Mrs. Dean of Boston, received, as hosts and hostesses, all the Knowltons, some two hundred in number.

The business meeting then followed, and the work of the Executive Committee at Springfield was approved and adopted.

The following Officers for the ensuing year were elected :

President, Hon. Hosea M. Knowlton, Attorney General for Mass., New Bedford.

Vice-President, Edwin F. Knowlton, N. York City.

Sec. and Treas., Wm. H. Griffith, Albany, N. Y.

A vote of thanks was extended to the absent Secretary for the zeal and fidelity with which he had performed his duties, and the Historian was instructed

THE KNOWLTON ASSOCIATION.

While pursuing our particular line of genealogical research early in 1895, the Historian and the Secretary of this Association visited many places of residence of the early Knowltons, finding ready access to ancient records, making the pleasant acquaintance of many living Knowltons, and by subsequent correspondence with persons of the name in nearly every State and Territory they were soon furnished with a list of names surprisingly large, and that indicated how widely the original Ipswich family had spread. In the autumn of the same year it became locally—but not generally—known that the State of Connecticut was about to erect a bronze statue in the Capitol grounds at Hartford, as a monument to the heroism of the brave and patriotic Col. Thomas Knowlton, of Ashford, Conn., who was a prominent figure in the Battle of Bunker Hill, and who fell at Harlem Heights, N. Y., September 16, 1776. This long-deserved and long-delayed tribute to a Revolutionary hero had been the cherished aim of a few descendants of that hero for many years, and to the zeal and perseverance of Dr. Thomas Knowlton Marcy, of Windsor, a great-grandson of Col. Thomas, and Hon. P. H. Woodward of Hartford, fell, as an inheritance, the labor and honor of giving to the State and to history the permanent and happy consummation of all preceding hopes and efforts. On November 13, 1895, the statue was unveiled with impressive ceremonies, in the presence of the State Officers, members of the Conn. Historical Society, and of the various patriotic societies, representative citizens of Hartford and other cities, and members of the Knowlton family, a list of whom, prepared by Mr. Wm. H. Griffith and the Rev. Dr. C. H. W. Stocking, was adopted as the basis of invitations.

The Presentation Address was made by the Hon. Chas. Dudley Warner, Chairman of the Commission of Sculpture, the Speech of Acceptance was made by Governor Coffin, and the Historical address—a valuable and permanent contribution to history—was delivered by Hon. P. H. Woodward.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies, such members of the Knowlton family as had knowledge of the desired movement, met in the Hall of Representatives to consider the expediency of forming a permanent organization for the purpose of bringing together the scattered members of the family in America; of holding annual re-unions at convenient places; of promoting mutual interest and good fellowship; of strengthening patriotic sentiment, and of putting into permanent form the genealogy and annals of the family from their earliest progenitor down to the present time.

Dr. Thomas Knowlton Marcy, of Windsor, Conn. was chosen Chairman and Wm. H. Griffith of Albany, N. Y., Secretary of the meeting. Several patriotic speeches were made, after which the officers were appointed a committee to draft a Constitution and By-laws, the following officers being elected:

Pres., Hon. Marcus P. Knowlton, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Mass., Springfield, Mass.; V. Pres., Thomas Knowlton Marcy, M.D., Windsor, to send him a telegram expressing the sympathy and regret of the Association at his illness and consequent absence.

At 7 P. M. the Annual Banquet was held. The Menu was excellent, guests were animated and enthusiastic, and good cheer prevailed. Patriotic toasts were patriotically responded to, and an original poem was read by the Historian. The Knowlton Association justified its formation.
